PREFACE

IN the following Poem I have sought, by the medium of an imaginary Buddhist votary, to depict the life and character and indicate the philosophy of that noble hero and reformer, Prince Gautama of India, the founder of Buddhism.

A generation ago little or nothing was known in Europe of this great faith of Asia, which had nevertheless existed during twenty-four centuries, and at this day surpasses, in the number of its followers and the area of its prevalence, any other form of creed. Four hundred and seventy millions of our race live and die to the tenets of Gautama, and the spiritual dominions of this ancient teacher extend, at the present time, from Nepaul and Ceylon, over the whole Eastern Peninsula, to China, Japan, Thibet, Central Asia, Siberia, and even Swedish Lapland. India itself might fairly be included in this magnificent Empire of Belief, for though the profession of Buddhism has for the most part passed away from the land of its birth, the mark of Gautama's sublime teaching is stamped ineffaceably upon modern Brahmanism, and the most characteristic habits and convictions of the Hindus are clearly due to the benign influence of Buddha's precepts. More than a third of mankind, therefore, owe their moral and religious ideas to this illustrious prince, whose personality, though imperfectly revealed in the existing sources of information, cannot but appear the highest, gentlest, holiest, and most beneficent, with one exception, in the history of Thought. Discordant in frequent particulars, and sorely overlaid by corruptions, inventions, and misconceptions, the Buddhistical books yet agree in the one point of recording nothing—no single act or word—which mars the perfect purity and tenderness of this Indian teacher, who united the truest princely qualities with the intellect of a sage and the passionate devotion of a martyr. Even M. Barthélemy St Hilaire, totally misjudging as he does, many points of Buddhism, is well cited by Professor Max Muller as saying of Prince Siddârtha, "Sa vie n'a point de tache. Son constant héroïsme égale sa conviction ; et si la théorie qu'il préconise est fautive, les exemples personnels qu'il donne sont irréprochables. Il est le modèle achevé de toutes les vertus qu'il prêche, son abnégation, sa charité, son inaltérable douceur ne se démentent point un seul instant . . . Il prépare silencieusement sa doctrine par six années de retraite et de méditation, il la propage par la seule puissance de la parole et de la persuasion" pendant plus d'un demi-siècle, et qu'ad il meurt entre les bras de ses disciples, c'est avec la sérénité d'un sage qui a pratiqué le bien toute sa vie, et qui est assuré d'avoir trouvé le vrai." To Gautama has consequently been granted this stupendous conquest of humanity; and—though he discountenanced ritual, and declared himself, even when on the threshold of Nirvana, to be only what all other men might become—the love and gratitude of Asia, disobeying his mandate, have given him fervent worship. Forests of flowers are daily laid upon his stainless shrines, and countless millions of lips daily repeat the formula "I take refuge in Buddha!"

The Buddha of this poem—if, as need not be doubted, he really existed—was born on the borders of Nepal about 620 B.C., and died about 543 B.C. at Kusinagara in Oudh. In point of age, therefore, most other creeds are youthful compared with this venerable religion, which has in it the eternity of a universal hope, the immortality of a boundless love, an indestructible element of faith in final good, and the proudest assertion ever made of human freedom. The extravagances which disfigure the record and practice of Buddhism are to be referred to that inevitable degradation which priesthoods always inflict upon great ideas committed to their charge. The power and sublimity of Gautama's original doctrines should be estimated by their influence, not by their interpreters ; nor by that innocent but lazy and ceremonious church which has arisen on the foundations of the Buddhistic Brotherhood or "Sangha."

I have put my poem into a Buddhist's mouth, because, to appreciate the spirit of Asiatic thoughts, they should be regarded from the Oriental point of view, and neither the miracles which consecrate this record, nor the philosophy which it embodies, could have been otherwise so naturally reproduced. The doctrine of Transmigration, for instance—startling to modern minds—was established and thoroughly accepted by the Hindus of Buddha's time, that period when Jerusalem was being taken by Nebuchadnezzar, when Nineveh was falling to the Medes, and Marseilles was founded by the Phœnicians. The exposition here offered of so antique a system is of necessity incomplete, and—in obedience to the laws of poetic art—passes rapidly by many matters philosophically most important, as well as over the long ministry of Gautama. But my purpose has been obtained if any just conception be here conveyed of the lofty character of this noble prince, and of the general purport of his doctrines. As to these latter there has arisen prodigious controversy among the erudite, who will be aware that I have taken the imperfect Buddhistic citations much as they stand in Spence

Hardy's work, and have also modified more than one passage in the received narratives. The views, however, here indicated of "Nirvana," "Dharma," "Karma," and the other chief features of Buddhism, are at least the fruits of considerable study, and also of a firm conviction that a third of mankind would never have been brought to believe in blank abstractions, or in Nothingness as the issue and crown of Being.

Finally, in reverence to the illustrious Promulgator of this "Light of Asia," and in homage to the many eminent scholars who have devoted noble labours to his memory, for which both repose and ability are wanting to me, I beg that the shortcomings of my too-hurried study may be forgiven. It has been composed in the brief intervals of days without leisure, but is inspired by an abiding desire to aid in the better mutual knowledge of East and West. The time may come, I hope, when this book and my "Indian Song of Songs," and "Indian Idylls," will preserve the memory of one who loved India and the Indian peoples.

THE LIGHT OF ASIA

BOOK THE FIRST

*THE Scripture of the Saviour of the World, Lord Buddha—Prince Siddârtha styled on earth—
In Earth and Heavens and Hells Incomparable,
All-honoured, Wisest, Best, most Pitiful,
The Teacher of Nirvâna and the Law*

Thus came he to be born again for meo

Below the highest sphere four Regeots sit
Who rule our world, and under them are zones
Nearer, but high, where saintliest spirits dead
Wait thrice ten thousand years, then live again,
And on Lord Buddha, waiting in that sky,
Came for our sakes the five sure signs of birth,
So that the Devas knew the signs, and said
"Buddha will go again to help the World"
"Yea!" spake He, "now I go to help the World
This last of many times, for birth and death
End hence for me and those who learn my Law
I will go down among the Sâkyas,
Under the southward snows of Himalay,
Where pious people live and a just King"

That night the wife of King Suddhōdana,
 Maya the Queen, asleep beside her Lord, Dreamed a strange dream, dreamed that a star from heaven—

Splendid, six-rayed, in colour rosy-pearl,
 Whereof the token was an Elephant
 Six-tusked, and white as milk of Kamadhuk—
 Shot through the void, and, shining into her,
 Entered her womb upon the right. Awaked,
 Bliss beyond mortal mother's filled her breast,
 And over half the earth a lovely light

Forewent the morn The strong hills shook, the waves

Sank lulled; all flowers that blow by day came forth
 As 'twere high noon, down to the farthest hells Passed the Queen's joy, as when warm sunshine thrills

Wood-glooms to gold, and into all the deeps
 A tender whisper pierced. "Oh ye," it said,
 "The dead that are to live, the live who die, Uprise, and hear, and hope! Buddha is come!"
 Whereat 10 Limbos numberless much peace
 Spread, and the world's heart throbbed, and a wind blew

With unknown freshness over lands and seas
 And when the morning dawned, and this was told,
 The grey dream-readers said "The dream is good!"
 The Crab is in conjunction with the Sun;
 The Queen shall bear a boy, a holy child
 Of wondrous wisdom, profiting all flesh,
 Who shall deliver men from ignorance,
 Or rule the world, if he will deign to rule

Lo this wise was the holy Buddha born

Queen Maya stood at noon, her days fulfilled,
Under a Palsa in the Palace-grounds,
A stately trunk, straight as a temple-shaft,
With crown of glossy leaves and fragrant blooms ;
And, knowing the time come—for all things knew—
The conscious tree bent down its bows to make A bower about Queen Mayi's majesty,
And Earth put forth a thousand sudden flowers
To spread a couch, while, ready for the bath,
The rock hard by gave out a limpid stream
Of crystal flow So brought she forth her child
Pangless—he having on his perfect form
The mirls, thirty and two, of blessed birth,
Of which the great news to the Palace came
But when they brought the paroted palaoquin
To fetch him home, the bearers of the poles
Were the four Regents of the Earth, come down
From Mount Sumeru—they who write men's deeds
On brazen plates—the Angel of the East,
Whose hosts are clad in silver robes, and bear
Targets of pearl the Angel of the South,
Whose horsemen, the Kumbhandas, ride blue steeds,
With sapphire shields the Angel of the West,
By Nāgas followed, riding steeds blood-red,
With coral shields the Angel of the North,
Environed by his Yakshas, all in gold,
On yellow horses, bearing shields of gold
These, with their pomp invisible, came down
And took the poles, in east and outward garb
Like bearers, yet most mighty gods, and gods

Walked free with men that day, though men knew not

For Heaven was filled with gladness for Earth's sake,
Knowing Lord Buddha thus was come again.

But King Suddhōdana wist not of this,
The portents troubled, till his dream-readers
Augured a Prince of earthly dominance,
A Chakravartin, such as rise to rule
Once in each thousand years, seven gifts he has—
The Chakra-ratna, disc divine, the gem,
The horse, the Aswa-ratna, that proud steed
Which tramps the clouds; a snow-white elephant,
The Hastu-ratna, born to bear his King,
The crafty Minister, the General
Unconquered, and the wife of peerless grace,
The Istri-ratna, lovelier than the Dawn.
For which, gifts looking with this wondrous boy,
The King gave order that his town should keep High festival; therefore the ways were swept,
Rose-odours sprinkled in the street, the trees
Were hung with lamps and flags, while merry crowds
Gaped on the sword-players and posturers,
The jugglers, charmers, swingers, rope-walkers,
The nauteh-girls in their spangled skirts, and bells
That chime light laughter round their restless feet;
The masquers wrapped in skins of bear and deer,
The tiger-tamers, wrestlers, quail-fighters,
Beaters of drum and twanglers of the wire,
Who made the people happy by command.
Moreover, from afar came merchant-men,
Bringing, on tidings of this birth, rich gifts

In golden trays, goat-shawls, and nard, and jade, Turkises, "evening-sky" tint, woven webs—
 So fine twelve folds hide not a modest face—
 Waist-cloths sewn thick with pearls, and sandalwood,

Homage from tribute cities, so they called Their Prince Savārthasiddh, "All-Prospering," Briefer, Siddārtha

 'Mongst the strangers came
 A grey-haired saint, Asita, one whose ears, Long closed to earthly things, caught heavenly sounds,

And heard at prayer beneath his peepul-tree
 The Devas singing songs at Buddha's birth
 Wondrous in lore he was by age and fasts,
 Him, drawing oigh, seeming so reverend,
 The King saluted, and Queen Maya made
 To lay her babe before such holy feet,
 But when he saw the Prince the old man cried
 "Ah, Queen, not so!" and thereupon he touched
 Eight times the dust, laid his waste visage there, Saying, "O Babe! I worship! Thou art He!
 I see the rosy light, the foot-sole marks,
 The soft curled tendril of the Swastika,
 The sacred primal signs thirty and two,
 The eighty lesser tokens Thou art Buddh,
 And thou wilt preach the Law and save all flesh
 Who learn the Law, though I shall never hear,
 Dying too soon, who lately longed to die,
 Howbeit I have seen Thee Koow, O King!
 This is that Blossom on our human tree
 Which opens once in many myriad years—

But opened, fills the world with Wisdom's scent
 And Love's dropped honey, from thy royal root
 A Heavenly Lotus springs Ah, happy House!
 Yet not all-happy, for a sword must pierce
 Thy bowels for this boy—whilst thou, sweet Queen!
 Dear to all gods and men for this great birth,
 Henceforth art grown too sacred for more woe,
 And life is woe, therefore in seven days
 Painless thou shalt attain the close of pain ”

Which fell for on the seventh evening
 Queen Maya smiling slept, and waked no more,
 Passing content to Trâyastrinshas-Heaven,
 Where countless Devas worship her, and wait
 Attendant on that radiant Motherhead
 But for the Babe they found a foster-nurse,
 Princess Mahâprajāpati—her breast
 Nourished with noble milk the lips of Him
 Whose lips comfort the worlds.

When th' eighth year passed,
 The careful King bethought to teach his son
 All that a Prince should learn, for still he shunned
 The too vast presage of those miracles,
 The glories and the sufferings of a Buddha
 So, in full council of his Ministers,
 “Who is the wisest man, great sirs,” he asked,
 “To teach my Prince that which a Prince should know ”

Whereto gave answer each with instant voice “King! Viśwamitra is the wisest one,
 The farthest-seen in Scriptures, and the best
 In learning, and the manual arts, and all ”

Thus Viswamitra came and heard commands,
 And, on a day found fortunate, the Prince
 Took up his slate of ox-red sandal-wood
 All beautified by gems around the rim,
 And sprinkled smooth with dust of emery,
 These took he, and his writing-stick, and stood
 With eyes bent down before the Sage, who said,
 "Child, write this Scripture," speaking slow the verse
 "Gâyatri" named, which only High-born hear —

*Om, tatsaviturvarenyam
 Bhargo devasya dhīmahi
 Dhiyo yo na prachodayât*

"Acharya, I write," meekly replied
 The Prince, and quickly on the dust he drew—
 Not in one script, but many characters—
 The sacred verse, Nagri and Dakshin, Ni,
 Mangal, Parusha, Yava, Tirthi, Uk,
 Darad, Sikhyan, Mana, Madhyachar,
 The pictured writings and the speech of signs,
 Tokens of cave men and the sea-peoples,
 Of those who worship snakes beneath the earth,
 And those who flame adore and the sun's orb,
 The Magians and the dwellers on the mounds,
 Of all the nations all strange scripts he traced
 One after other with his writing-stick,
 Reading the master's verse in every tongue
 And Viswamitra said, "It is enough,
 Let us to numbers

After me repeat
 Your numeration till we reach the Lakh,
 One, two, three, four, to ten, and then by tens

To hundreds, thousands " After him the child
 Named digits, decads, centuries ; nor paused,
 The round lakh reached, but softly murmured on,
 " Then comes the kôti, nahut, ninnahut,
 Khambri, viskhamba, abab, attata,
 To kumuds, gundhikas, and utpalas,
 By pundarikas unto padumas,
 Which last is how you count the utmost grains
 Of Hastagiri ground to finest dust ;
 But beyond that a numeration is,
 The Kâtha, used to note the stars of night ;
 The Kôti-Kâtha, for the ocean drops ,
 Ingga, the calculus of circulars ,
 Sarvanikehepa, by the which you deal
 With all the sands of Gunga, till we come
 To Antah-Kalpas, where the unit is The sands of ten crore Gungas If one seeks More comprehensive scale, th' arithmic mounts
 By the Asankya, which is the tale
 Of all the drops that in ten thousand years
 Would fall on all the worlds by daily rain ; Thence unto Maha-Kalpas, by the which The Gods compute their future and their past."

" 'Tis good," the sage rejoined " Most noble Prince,

If these thou know'st, needs it that I should teach
 The mensuration of the lineal ? "

Humbly the boy replied, " Acharya '

Be pleased to hear me Paramânus ten

A parasukshma make , ten of those build

The trasarene, and seven trasarenes

One mote's-length floating in the beam, seven motes
 The whisker-point of mouse, and ten of these One likhya , likhyas ten a ynka, ten Yukas a heart of barley, which is held
 Seven times a wasp-waist, so unto the grain
 Of mung and mustard and the barley-coro,
 Whereof ten give the finger-joint, twelve joints
 The span, wherefrom we reach the cubit, staff, Bow-length, lance-length, while twenty leogths of lance

Mete what is named a 'breath,' which is to say
 Such space as man may stride with lungs once filled, Whereof a gow is forty, four times that
 A yôjana , and, Master¹ if it please,
 I shall recite how many sun-motes lie
 From end to end within a yôjana ”
 Thereat, with instant skill, the little Prince Pronounced the total of the atoms true
 But Viswamitra heard it on his face
 Prostrate before the boy, “For thou,” he cried, “Art Teacher of thy teachers—thou, not I,
 Art Gûrû. Oh, I worship thee, sweet Prince !
 That comest to my school only to show
 Thou knowest all without the books, and know'st Fair reverence besides ”

Which reverence

Lord Buddha kept to all his schoolmasters
 Albeit beyond their learning taught, in speech
 Right geotle, yet so wise, princely of mien,
 Yet softly-mannered, modest, deferent,
 And tender-hearted, though of fearless blood,
 No bolder horseman in the youthful band

E'er rode in gay chase of the shy gazelles;
No keener driver of the chariot
In mimic contest scoured the Palace-courts,
Yet in mid-play the boy would oftentimes pause,
Letting the deer pass free, would oftentimes yield
His half-won race because the labouring steeds
Fetched painful breath, or if his princely mates
Saddened to lose, or if some wistful dream
Swept o'er his thoughts And ever with the years
Waxed this compassionateness of our Lord,
Even as a great tree grows from two soft leaves
To spread its shade afar, but hardly yet
Knew the young child of sorrow, pain, or tears,
Save as strange names for things not felt by kings,
Nor ever to be felt Then it befell
In the Royal garden on a day of spring,
A flock of wild swans passed, voyaging north
To their nest-places on Himāla's breast
Calling in love-notes down their snowy line
The bright birds flew, by fond love piloted;
And Devadatta, cousin of the Prince,
Pointed his bow, and loosed a wilful shaft
Which found the wide wing of the foremost swan
Broad-spread to glide upon the free blue road,
So that it fell, the bitter arrow fixed,
Bright scarlet blood-gouts staining the pure plumes
Which seeing, Prince Siddhartha took the bird
Tenderly up, rested it in his lap—
Sitting with knees crossed, as Lord Buddha sits—
And, soothing with a touch the wild thing's fright,
Composed its ruffled wings, calmed its quiet heart,
Care-ssed it into peace with light kind palms

As soft as plum-tree-leaves an hour unrolled,
And while the left hand held, the right hand drew
The cruel steel forth from the wound, and laid
Cool leaves and healing honey on the smart.
Yet all so little knew the boy of pain
That curiously into his wrist he pressed
The arrow's barb, and vainly to feel it sting,
And turned with tears to soothe his bird again

Then some one came who said, "My Prince hath shot

A swan, which fell among the roses here,
He bids me pray you send it Will you send?"
"Nay," quoth Siddhartha, "if the bird were dead
To send it to the slayer might be well,
But the swan lives, my cousin hath but killed
The god-like speed which throbbed in this white wing"

And Devadatta answered, "The wild thing,
Living or dead, is his who fetched it down,
'Twas no man's in the clouds, but fall'n 'tis mine
Give me my prize, fair Cousin" Then our Lord
Laid the swan's neck beside his own smooth cheek
And gravely spake, "Slay no! the bird is mine,
The first of myriad things which shall be mine
By right of mercy and love's lordliness
For now I know, by what within me stirs,
That I shall teach compassion unto men
And be a speechless world's interpreter,
Abating this accursed flood of woe,
Not man's alone, but, if the Prince disputes,
Let him submit his matter to the wise"

And we will wait their word." So was it done ;
 In full divan the business had debate,
 And many thought this thing and many that ,
 Till there arose an unknown priest who said,
 " If life be aught, the saviour of a life
 Owns more the living thing than he can own
 Who sought to slay—the slayer spoils and wastes,
 The cherisher sustains, give him the bird " —
 Which judgment all found just, but when the King
 Sought out the sage for honour, he was gone,
 And some one saw a hooded snake glide forth,—
 The gods come oftentimes thus ! So our Lord Buddh Began his works of mercy.

Yet not more
 Knew he as yet of grief than that one bird's,
 Which, being healed, went joyous to its kind
 But on another day the King said, " Come,
 Sweet son ! and see the pleasure of the spring,
 And how the fruitful earth is wont to yield
 Its riches to the reaper, how my realm—
 Which shall be thine when the pile flames for me—
 Feeds all its mouths and keeps the King's chest filled
 Fair is the season with new leaves, bright blooms, Green grass, and cries of plough-time." So they rode

Into a land of wells and gardens, where,
 All up and down the rich red loam, the steers
 Strained their strong shoulders in the creaking yoke Dragging the ploughs, the fat soil rose and rolled In smooth long waves back from the plough, who drove Planted both feet upon the leaping share

To make the furrow deep, among the palms
The tinkle of the rippling water rang,
And where it ran the glad earth 'broidered it
With balsams and the spears of lemon-grass
Elsewhere were sowers who went forth to sow,
And all the jungle laughed with nesting-songs,
And all the thickets rustled with small life
Of lizard, bee, beetle, and creeping things
Pleased at the spring-time In the mango-sprays
The sun-birds flashed, alone at his green forge
Toiled the loud coppersmith, bee-eaters hawked,
Chasing the purple butterflies, beneath,
Striped squirrels raced, the mynas perked and picked,
The seven brown sisters chattered in the thorn,
The pied fish-tiger hung above the pool,
The egrets stalked among the buffaloes,
The kites sailed circles in the golden air,
About the painted temple peacocks flew,
The blue doves cooed from every well, far off
The village drums beat for some marriage-feast,
All things spoke peace and plenty, and the Prince Saw and rejoiced But, looking deep, he saw
The thorns which grow upon this rose of life
How the swart peasant sweated for his wage,
Toiling for leave to live, and how he urged
The great-eyed oxen through the flaming hours,
Goading their velvet flanks, then marked he, too,
How lizard fed on ant, and snake on him,
And kite on both, and how the fish-hawk robbed
The fish-tiger of that which it had seized,
The shrike chasing the bulbul, which did hunt
The jewelled butterflies, till everywhere

Each slew a slayer and in turn was slain,
 Life living upon death. So the fair show
 Veiled one vast, savage, grim conspiracy
 Of mutual murder, from the worm to man,
 Who himself kills his fellow, seeing which—
 The hungry ploughman and his labouring line,
 Their dewlaps blistered with the bitter yoke,
 The rage to live which makes all living strife—
 The Prince Siddârtha sighed "Is this," he said,
 "That happy earth they brought me forth to see"
 How salt with sweat the peasant's bread! how hard
 The oxen's service! in the brake how fierce
 The war of weak and strong! i' th' air what plots!
 No refuge e'en in water Go aside
 A space, and let me muse on what ye show."

So saying the good Lord Buddha seated him
 Under a jambu-tree, with ankles crossed—
 As holy statues sit—and first began
 To meditate this deep disease of life,
 What its far source and whence its remedy.
 So vast a pity filled him, such wide love
 For living things, such passion to heal pain,
 That by their stress his princely spirit passed
 To ecstacy, and, purged from mortal taint
 Of sense and self, the boy attained thereat
 Dhyâna, first step of "the path."

There flew

High overhead that hour five holy ones,
 Whose free wings faltered as they passed the tree.
 "What power superior draws us from our flight?"
 They asked,—for spirits feel all force divine,

And I now the sacred presence of the pure
Then, looking downward, they beheld the Buddh
Crowned with a rose-hued aureole, intent
On thoughts to give, while from the grove & once
Cried, "Rishis! this is He shall help the world, Descend and worship" So the Bright Ones came
And sang & song of praise, folding their wings,
Then journeyed on, taking good news to Gods

But certain from the King seeking the Prince Found him still musing, though the noon was past,
And the sun hastened to the western hills.
Yet, while all shadows moved, the jambu-tree's
Stayed in one quarter, overspreading him,
Lest the sloped rays should strike that sacred herd,
And he who saw this sight heard a voice say,
Amid the blossoms of the rose-apple,
"Let be the King's son! till the shadow goes Forth from his heart my shadow will not shift"

BOOK THE SECOND

Now, when our Lord was come to eighteen years,
The King commanded that there should be built
Three stately houses, one of hewn square beams
With cedar lining, warm for winter days,
One of veined marbles, cool for summer heat,
And one of burned bricks, with blue tiles bedecked,
Pleasant at seed-time, when the champaks bud—
Subha, Suramma, Ramma, were their names
Delicious gardens round about them bloomed,
Streams wandered wild, and musky thickets stretched,
With many a bright pavilion and fair lawn,
In midst of which Siddârtha strayed at will,
Some new delight provided every hour,
And happy hours he knew, for life was rich,
With youthful blood at quickest; yet still came
The shadows of his meditation back,
As the lake's silver dulls with driving clouds.

When the King marking, called his Ministers.
"Bethink ye, sirs¹ how the old Rishi spake,"
He said, "and what my dream-readers foretold
This boy, more dear to me than mine heart's blood,
Shall be of universal dominance,
Trampling the neck of all his enemies,
A King of kings—and this is in my heart,—
Or he shall tread the sad and lowly path

Of self-denial and of pious pains,
 Gaining who knows what good, when all is lost
 Worth keeping, and to this his wistful eyes
 Do still incline amid my palaces
 But ye are sage, and ye will counsel me,
 How may his feet be turned to that proud road
 Where they should walk, and all fair signs come true
 Which gave him Earth to rule, if he would rule?"

The eldest answered, "Maharaja! love
 Will cure these thin distempers, weave the spell
 Of woman's wiles about his idle heart
 What knows this noble boy of beauty yet,
 Eyes that make heaven forgot, and lips of balm?
 Find him soft wives and pretty playfellows,
 The thoughts ye cannot stay with brazen chains
 A girl's hair lightly binds"

And all thought good.

But the King answered, "If we seek him wives,
 Love chooseth oft times with another eye,
 And if we bid ring Beauty's garden round,
 To pluck what blossom pleases, he will smile
 And sweetly shun the joy he knows not of"
 Then said another, "Roams the barasiogh
 Until the fated arrow flies, for him,
 As for less lordly spirits, some one charms,
 Some face will seem a Paradise, some form
 Fairer than pale Dawn when she wakes the world.
 This do, my King! Commaod a festival
 Where the realm's maids shall be competitors
 In youth and grace, and sports that Sakyas use
 Let the Prince give the prizes to the fair,

And, when the lovely victors pass his seat,
There shall be those who mark if one or two Change the fixed sadness of his tender cheek,
So we may choose for Love with Love's own eyes,
And cheat his Highness into happiness."

This thing seemed good, wherefore, upon a day,
The criers bade the young and beautiful
Pass to the palace, for 'twas in command
To hold a court of pleasure, and the Prince
Would give the prizes, something rich for all,
The richest for the fairest judged. Thus flocked Kapilavastu's maidens to the gate,
Each with her dark hair newly smoothed and bound,
Eyelashes lusted with the soorma-stuck,
Fresh-bathed and scented, all in shawls and cloths
Of gayest, slender hands and feet new-stained
With crimson, and the tilka-spots stamped bright.
Fair show it was of all those Indian girls
Slow-pacing past the throne with large black eyes
Fixed on the ground; for when they saw the Prince
More than the awe of Majesty made beat
Their fluttering hearts, he sat so passionless, Gentle, but so beyond them. Each maid took
With down-dropped lids her gift, afraid to gaze,
And if the people hailed some lovelier one
Beyond her rivals worthy royal smiles,
She stood like a scared antelope to touch
The gracious hand, then fled to join her mates Trembling at favour, so divine he seemed,
So high and saint-like and above her world
Thus filed they, one bright maid after another,
The city's flowers, and all this beauteous march.

Was ending and the prizes spent, when last Came young Yasôdhara, and they that stood Nearest Siddhartha saw the princely boy
Start, as the radiant girl approached A form
Of heavenly mould a gait like Parvati's,
Eyes like a hind's in love-time, face so fair
Words cannot paint its spell, and she alone
Gazed full—folding her palms across her breasts—
On the boy's gaze, her stately neck unbent
"Is there a gift for me?" she asked, and smiled
"The gifts are gone," the Prince replied, "yet take This for amends, dear sister, of whose grace
Our happy city boasts," therewith he loosed
The emerald necklet from his throat, and clasped
Its green beads round her dark and silk-soft waist,
And their eyes mixed, and from the look sprang love

Long after—when enlightenment was full—
Lord Buddha, being prayed why thus his heart
Took fire at first glance of the Sakya girl, Answered, "We were not strangers, as to us
And all it seemed, in ages long gone by A hunter's son, playing with forest girls
By Yamun's springs, where Nandadevi stands,
Sate umpire while they raced beneath the firs
Like hares at eve that run their playful rings,
One with flower-stars he crowned, one with long plumes
Plucked from eyed pheasant and the jungle-cock,
One with fir-apples, but who ran the last
Came first for him, and unto her the boy
Gave a tame fawn and his heart's love beside

Aod in the wood they lived many glad years,
 Aod in the wood they undivided died
 Lo¹ as hid seed shoots after rainless years,
 So good and evil, pains and pleasures, hates
 And loves, and all dead deeds, come forth again
 Bearing bright leaves or dark, sweet fruit or sour.
 Thus I was he and she Yasôdhara,
 Aod while the wheel of birth and death turns round
 That which hath been must be between us two "

But they who watched the Prince at prize-giving Saw and heard all, and told the careful King
 How sate Siddârtha heedless, till there passed
 Great Suprabuddha's child, Yasôdhara,
 And how—at sudden sight of her—he changed,
 Aod how she gazed on him and he on her,
 And of the jewel-gift, and what beside Passed in their speaking glance

The fond King smiled.
 "Look¹ we have found a lure, take counsel now
 To fetch therewith our falcon from the clouds
 Let messengers be sent to ask the maid
 In marriage for my son " But it was law
 With Sâkyas, when any asked a maid
 Of noble house, fair and desirable,
 He must make good his skill in martial arts
 Against all suitors who should challenge it,
 Nor might this custom break itself for kings
 Therefore her father spake. "Say to the King,
 The child is sought by princes far and near,
 If thy most gentle soo can bend the bow,
 Sway sword, and back a horse better than they,

Best would he be in all and best to us
But how shall this be, with his cloistered ways? ”
Then the King's heart was sore, for now the Prince Begged sweet Yasôdhara for wife—in vain,
With Devadatta foremost at the bow,
Ardjuna master of all fiery steeds,
And Nanda chief in sword-play, but the Prince Laughed low and said, “These things, too, I have learned,
Make proclamation that thy son will meet
All comers at their chosen games I think
I shall not lose my love for such as these ”
So 'twas given forth that on the seventh day
The Prince Siddârtha summoned whoso would
To match with him in feats of manliness,
The victor's crown to be Yasôdhara

Therefore, upon the seventh day, there went
The Sâkya lords, and town and country round,
Unto the maidân, and the maid went too
Amid her kinsfolk, carried as a bride,
With music, and with litters gaily dight,
And gold-horned oxen, flower-caparisoned
Whom Devadatta claimed, of royal line,
And Nanda and Ardjuna, noble both,
The flower of all youths there, till the Prince came Riding his white horse Kantaka, which neighed, Astonished at this great strange world without Also Siddartha gazed with wondering eyes
On all those people born beneath the throne,
Otherwise housed than kings, otherwise fed,
And yet so like—perchance—in joys and griefs

But when the Prince saw sweet Yasôdhara,
 Brightly he smiled, and drew his silken rein,
 Leaped to the earth from Kantaka's broad back,
 Aod cried, "He is not worthy of this pearl
 Who is not worthiest; let my rivals prove
 If I have dared too much in seeking her"
 Theo Nanda challenged for the arrow-test
 Aod set a brazen drum six gows away,
 Ardjuna six and Devadatta eight,
 But Prince Siddârtha bade them set his drum
 Ten gows from off the line, until it seemed A cowny-shell for target Then they loosed,
 And Nanda pierced his drum, Ardjuna his,
 And Devadatta drove a well-aimed shaft
 Through both sides of his mark, so that the crowd marvelled and cried, and sweet Yasôdhara
 Dropped the gold sari o'er her fearful eyes,
 Lest she should see her Prince's arrow fail.
 But he, taking their bow of lacquered cane,
 With sinews bound, and strung with silver wire,
 Which none but stalwart arms could draw a span, Thrummed it—low laughing—drew the twisted string
 Till the horns kissed, and the thick belly snapped
 "That is for play, not love," he said, "hath none
 A bow more fit for Sâkya lords to use"
 And one said, "There is Sinhahânu's bow,
 Kept in the temple since we know not when,
 Which none can string, nor draw if it be strung."
 "Fetch me," he cried, "that weapon of a man!"
 They brought the ancient bow, wrought of black steel

Laid with gold tendrils on its branching curves
Like bison-horns, and twice Siddârtha tried Its strength across his knee, then spake—"Shoot now

With this, my cousins!" but they could not bring
The stubborn arms a hand's-breadth nigher use,
Then the Prince, lightly leaning, bent the bow,
Slipped home the eye upon the notch, and twanged
Sharply the cord, which, like an eagle's wing
Thrilling the air, sang forth so clear and loud,
That feeble folk at home that day inquired
"What is this sound?" and people answered them
"It is the sound of Sinhahânu's bow,
Which the King's son has strung and goes to shoot"
Then sitting fair a shaft, he drew and loosed,
And the keen arrow clove the sky, and drave
Right through that farthest drum, nor stayed its flight,
But skimmed the plain beyond, past reach of eye

Next, Devadatta challenged with the sword,
And clove a Talas-tree six fingers thick,
Ardjuna seven, and Nanda cut through nine,
But two such stems together grew, and both Siddârtha's blade shred at one flashing stroke,
Keen, but so smooth that the straight trunks upstood,
And Nanda cried, "His edge turned!" and the maid

Trembled anew seeing the trees erect,
Until the Devas of the air, who watched,
Blew light breaths from the south, and both green crowns
Crashed in the sand, clean-felled

Then brought they steeds,
High-mettled, nobly-bred, and three times scoored
Around the maidân, but white Kantaka
Left even the fleetest far behind—so swift,
That ere the foam fell from his mouth to earth
Twenty spear-lengths he flew, but Nanda said,
“We too might win with such as Kantaka,
Fetch an unbroken horse, and let men see Who best can back him.” So the syces brought A stallion dark as night, led by three chains,
Fierce-eyed, with nostrils wide and tossing mane,
Unshod, unsaddled, for no rider yet
Had crossed him Three times each young Sakya
Sprang to his mighty back, but the hot steed
Furiously reared, and flung them to the plain
In dust and shame, only Ardjuna held
His seat awhile, and, bidding loose the chains, Lashed the black flank, and shook the bit, and held
The proud jaws fast with grasp of master-hand,
So that in storms of wrath and rage and fear
The savage stallion circled once the plain Half-tamed, but sudden turned with naked teeth,
Gripped by the foot Ardjuna, tore him down,
And would have slain him, but the groom ran in Fettering the maddened beast Then all men cried, “Let not Siddârtha meddle with this Bhut,
Whose liver is a tempest, and his blood Red flame,” but the Prince said, “Let go the chains,
Give me his forelock only,” which he held
With quiet grasp, and, speaking some low word,
Laid his right palm across the stallion’s eyes,

Hand fast in hand, and heart beating with heart,
The veil of black and gold drawn close again

Long after—when enlightenment was come—
They prayed Lord Buddha touching all, and why
She wore this black and gold, and stepped so proud
And the World-honoured answered, "Unto me
This was unknown, albeit it seemed half-known,
For while the wheel of birth and death turns round, Past things and thoughts, and buried lives come back.

I now remember, myriad rains ago,
What time I roamed Himâla's hanging woods,
A tiger, with my striped and hungry kind,
I, who am Buddh, couched in the kusa grass
Gazing with green blinked eyes upon the herds
Which pastured near and nearer to their death
Round my day-lair; or underneath the stars
I roamed for prey, savage, insatiable,
Sniffing the paths for track of man and deer.
Amid the beasts that were my fellows then,
Met in deep jungle or by reedy jheel,
A tigress, comeliest of the forest, set
The males at war, her hide was lit with gold,
Black-broidered like the veil Yasôdhara
Wore for me, hot the strife waxed in that wood
With tooth and claw, while, underneath a neem
The fair beast watched us bleed, thus fiercely wooed.
And I remember, at the end she came,
Snarling, past this and that torn forest-lord
Whom I had conquered, and with fawning jaws
Licked my quick-heaving flank, and with me went Into the wild with proud steps, amorously

The wheel of birth and death turns low and high "

Therefore the maid was given unto the Prince
A willing spoil, and when the stars were good—
Mesha, the Red Ram, being Lord of heaven—
The marriage feast was kept, as Sakyas use,
The golden gadi set, the carpet spread,
The wedding garlands hung, the arm-threads tied,
The sweet cake broke, the rice and attar thrown,
The two straws floated on the reddened milk,
Which, coming close, betokened "love till death.
The seven steps taken thrice round the fire,
The gifts bestowed on holy men, the alms
And temple-offerings made, the mantras sung,
The garments of the bride and bridegroom tied Then the grey father spoke "Worshipful Prince,
She that was ours henceforth is only thine,
Be good to her, who hath her life in thee "
Wherewith they brought home sweet Yasôdharâ,
With songs and trumpets, to the Prince's arms,
And love was all in all

Yet not to love

Alone trusted the King, love's prison-house
Stately and beautiful he bade them build,
So that in all the earth no marvel was Like Vishraman, the Prince's pleasure-place
Midway in the wide palace-grounds there rose
A verdant hill whose base Rohini bathed,
Murmuring idown from Himâly's broad feet,
To bear its tribute into Gunga's waves
Southward a growth of tamarind trees and sal,

Thick set with pale sky-coloured ganthi flowers,
Shut out the world, save if the city's hum
Came on the wind no harsher than when bees
Buzz out of sight in thickets. Northwards soared
The stainless ramps of huge Himâla's wall,
Ranged in white ranks against the blue—untrod,
Infinite, wonderful—whose uplands vast,
And lifted universe of crest and crag,
Shoulder and shelf, green slope and icy horn,
Riven ravine, and splintered precipice Led climbing thought higher and higher, until
It seemed to stand in heaven and speak with gods.
Beneath the snows dark forests spread, sharp-laced
With leaping cataracts and veiled with clouds.
Lower grew rose-oaks and the great fir groves
Where echoed pheasant's call and panther's cry,
Clatter of wild sheep on the stones, and scream
Of circling eagles—under these the plain
Gleamed like a praying-carpet at the foot
Of those divinest altars—Fronting this
The builders set the bright pavilion up,
Fair-planted on the terraced hill, with towers
On either flank and pillared cloisters round
Its beams were carved with stories of old time—
Radha and Krishna and the sylvan girls—
Sita and Hanuman and Draupadi,
And on the middle porch God Ganesha,
With disc and hook—to bring wisdom and wealth—
Propitious sate, wreathing his sidelong trunk
By winding ways of garden and of court
The inner gate was reached, of marble wrought,
White, with pink veins; the lintel lazuli,

The threshold alabaster, and the doors
 Sandal-wood, cut in pictured panelling,
 Whereby to lofty halls and shadowy bowers
 Passed the delighted foot, on stately stairs,
 Through latticed galleries, 'neath painted roofs
 And clustering columns, where cool fountains—fringed

With lotus and nelumbo—danced, and fish
 Gleamed through their crystal, scarlet, gold, and blue
 Great-eyed gazelles in sunny alcoves browsed
 The blown red roses, birds of rainbow wing
 Fluttered among the palms, doves, green and grey,
 Built their safe nests on gilded cornices,
 Over the shining pavements peacocks drew
 The splendours of their trains, sedately watched
 By milk-white herons and the small house-owls
 The plum-necked parrots swung from fruit to fruit,
 The yellow sunbirds whirled from bloom to bloom,
 The timid lizards on the lattice basked
 Fearless, the squirrels ran to feed from hand,
 For all was peace the shy black snake, that gives Fortune to households, sunned his sleepy coils
 Under the moon-flowers, where the musk-deer played,

And brown-eyed monkeys chattered to the crows
 And all this House of love was peopled fair
 With sweet attendance, so that in each part
 With lovely sights were gentle faces found,
 Soft speech and willing service, each one glad
 To gladden, pleased at pleasure, proud to obey,
 Till life glided beguiled, like a smooth stream
 Banked by perpetual flow'rs, Yāsôdhara

Queen of the enchanting Court

But, innermost,
Beyond the richness of those hundred halls,
A secret chamber lurked, where skill had spent
All lovely fantasies to lull the mind.
The entrance of it was a cloistered square—
Roofed by the sky, and in the midst a tank—
Of milky marble built, and laid with slabs
Of milk-white marble, bordered round the tank
And on the steps, and all along the frieze
With tender inlaid work of agate-stones
Cool as to tread in summer-time on snows
It was to loiter there, the sunbeams dropped
Their gold, and, passing into porch and niche,
Softened to shadows, silvery, pale, and dim,
As if the very Day paused and grew Eve
In love and silence at that bower's gate,
For there beyond the gate the chamber was,
Beautiful, sweet, a wonder of the world !
Soft light from perfumed lamps through windows fell,
Of nakre and stained stars of lucent film,
On golden cloths outspread, and silken beds,
And heavy splendour of the purdah's fringe,
Lifted to take only the loveliest in Here, whether it was night or day none knew,
For always streamed that softened light, more bright
Than sunrise, but as tender as the eve's,
And always breathed sweet airs, more joy-giving
Than morning's, but as cool as midnight's breath,
And night and day lutes sighed, and night and day
Delicious foods were spread, and dewy fruits,
Sherbets new chilled with snows of Himalay,

And sweetmeats made of subtle daintiness,
 With sweet tree-milk in its own ivory cup
 And night and day served there a chosen band
 Of nautch girls, cup-bearers, and cymballers,
 Delicate, dark-browed ministers of love,
 Who fanned the sleeping eyes of the happy Prince,
 And when he waked, led back his thoughts to bliss
 With music whispering through the blooms, and charm

Of amorous songs and dreamy dances, linked
 By chime of ankle-bells and wave of arms
 And silver vîta-strings, while essences
 Of musk and champak, and the blue haze spread
 From burning spices, soothed his soul again
 To drowse by sweet Yasôdhara, and thus Siddârtha lived forgetting

Furthermore,

The King commanded that within those walls
 No mention should be made of death or age,
 Sorrow, or pain, or sickness If one drooped
 In the lovely Court—her dark glance dim, her feet
 Faint to the dance—the guiltless criminal
 Passed forth an exile from that Paradise,
 Lest he should see and suffer at her woe
 Bright-eyed intendants watched to execute
 Sentence on such as spake of the harsh world Without, where aches and plagues were, tears and fears,

And wail of mourners, and grim fume of pyres
 'Twas treason if a thread of silver strayed
 In tress of singing-girl or nautch dancer,
 And every dawa the dying rose was plucked,

The dead leaves hid, all evil sights removed
For said the King, "If he shall pass his youth
Far from such things as move to wistfulness,
And brooding on the empty eggs of thought,
The shadow of this fate, too vast for man,
May fade, belike, and I shall see him grow
To that great stature of fair sovereignty
When he shall rule all lands—if he will rule—
The King of kings and Glory of his time"

Wherefore, around that pleasant prison-house—
Where love was gaoler and delights its bars—
But far removed from sight, the King bade build
A massive wall, and in the wall a gate
With brazen folding-doors, which but to roll
Back on their hinges asked a hundred arms,
Also the noise of that prodigious gate
Opening, was heard full half a yôjana
And inside this another gate he made,
And yet within another—through the three Must one pass if he quit that Pleasure-house
Three mighty gates there were, bolted and barred,
And over each was set a faithful watch,
And the King's order said, "Suffer no man
To pass the gates, though he should be the Prince
This on your lives—even though it be my son."

BOOK THE THIRD

In which calm home of happy light and love
Ligged our Lord Buddha, koowioo not of woc,
Nor waot, nor paio, nor plague, nor age, nor death,
Save as when sleepers roam dim seas in dreams,
And land aweared on the shores of day,
Bringing strange merchandise from that black voyage.
Thus oftimes, when he lay with gentle head
Lulled oo the dark breasts of Yasôdhara,
Her food hands fanning slow his sleeping lids,
He would start up aod cry, "My world! Oh, world!
I hear! I know! I come!" And she would ask,
"What ails my Lord?" with large eyes terror-struck,

For at such times the pity to his look
Was awful, and his visage like a god's Theo would he smile again to stay her tears,
Aod bid the vios sound, but once they set
A stringed gourd on the sill, there where the wind Could lioger o'er its notes aod play at will—Wild music makes the wind oo silver strings—
And those who lay around heard only that,
But Prioce Siddârtha heard the Devas play,
And to his ears they sang such words as these.—

*We are the voices of the wandering wind,
Which moan for rest and rest can never find,*

*Lo ! as the wind is, so is mortal life,
A moan, a sigh, a sob, a storm, a strife.*

*Wherefore and whence we are ye cannot know,
Nor where life springs, nor whither life doth go ;
We are as ye are, ghosts from the mane,
What pleasure have we of our changeful pain ?*

*What pleasure hast thou of thy changeless bliss ?
Nay, if love lasted, there were joy in this ,
But life's way is the wind's way, all these things
Are but brief voices breathed on shifting strings*

*O Maya's son ! because we roam the earth
Moan we upon these strings , we make no mirth,
So many woes we see in many lands,
So many streaming eyes and wringing hands*

*Yet mock we while we wail, for, could they know,
This life they cling to is but empty show ,
'Twere all as well to bid a cloud to stand,
Or hold a running river with the hand.*

*But thou that art to save, thine hour is nigh !
The sad world wasteth in its misery,
The blind world stumbleth on its round of pain ;
Rise, Maya's child ! wake ! slumber not again !*

*We are the voices of the wandering wind .
Wander thou, too, O Prince, thy rest to find ;
Leave love for love of lovers, for woe's sake Quit state for sorrow, and deliverance make.*

*So sigh we, passing o'er the silver strings,
To thee who know'st not yet of earthly things,
So say we, mocking, as we pass away,
These lovely shadows wherewith thou dost play.*

Thereafter it befel he sate at eve
Amid his beauteous Court, holding the hand
Of sweet Yasôdhara, and some maid told—
With breaks of music when her rich voice dropped—
An ancient tale to speed the hour of dusk,
Of love, and of a magic horse, and lands
Wonderful, distant, where pale peoples dwelled,
And where the sun at night sank into seas
Then spake he, sighing, "Chitra brings me back
The wind's song in the strings with that fair tale
Give her, Yisôdhara, thy pearl for thanks
But thou, my pearl¹ is there so wide a world?
Is there a land which sees the great sun roll
Into the waves, and are their hearts like ours, Countless, unknown, not happy—it may be—
Whom we might succour if we knew of them?
Ofttimes I marvel, as the Lord of day
Treads from the east his kingly road of gold,
Who first on the world's edge hath hailed his beam,
The children of the morning, oftentimes,
Even in thine arms and on thy breasts, bright wife,
Sore have I panted, at the sun's decline,
To pass with him into that crimson west
And see the peoples of the evening
There must be many we should love—how else?
Now have I in this hour so ache, at last,
Thy soft lips cannot kiss away oh, girl¹

O Chitra ! you that know of fairyland !
Where tether they that swift steed of thy tale ?
My palace for one day upon his back,
To ride and ride and see the spread of the earth ;
Nay, if I had yon callow vulture's plumes—
The carrion heir of wider realms than mine—
How would I stretch for topmost Himalay,
Light where the rose-gleam lingers on those snows,
And strain my gaze with searching what is round !
Why have I never seen and never sought ?
Tell me what lies beyond our brazen gates ”

Then one replied, “ The city first, fair Prince !
The temples, and the gardens, and the groves,
And then the fields, and afterwards fresh fields,
With nullahs, maidāns, jungle, loss on loss,
And next King Bimbasāra's realm, and then
The vast flat world, with crores on crores of folk.”
“ Good,” said Siddārtha, “ let the word be sent That Channa yoke my chariot—at noon
To-morrow I shall ride and see beyond ”

Whereof they told the King “ Our Lord, thy son
Wills that his chariot be yoked at noon,
That he may ride abroad and see mankind ”

“ Yea ! ” spake the careful King, “ 'tis time he see,
But let the criers go about and bid
My city deck itself, so there be met
No noisome sight, and let none blind or maimed,
None that is sick, or stricken deep in years,
No leper, and no feeble folk come forth ”

Therefore the stones were swept, and up and down
The water-carriers sprinkled all the streets
From spirting skins, the housewives scattered fresh
Red powder on their thresholds, strung new wreaths,
And trimmed the tulsi-bush before their doors
The paintings on the walls were heightened up
With liberal brush, the trees set thick with flags,
The idols gilded, in the four-and twenty ways
Suryadeva and the great gods shone
'Mid shrines of leaves, so that the city seemed A capital of some enchanted land
Also the criers passed, with drum and gong,
Proclaiming loudly, "Ho! all citizens,
The King commands that there be seen to-day
No evil sight let no one blind or maimed
None that is sick, or stricken deep in years,
No leper, and no feeble folk go forth
Let none, too, burn his dead nor bring them out
'Till nightfall Thus Suddhâdana commands"

So all was comely and the houses trim
Throughout Kapilavastu, while the Prince
Came forth in painted car, which two steers drew,
Snow-white, with swinging dewlaps, and huge humps
Wrinkled against the carved and lacquered yoke
Goodly it was to mark the people's joy
Greeting their Prince, and glad Siddhartha waxed
At sight of all those liege and friendly folk Bright-elad and laughing as if life were good
"Fair is the world," he said, "it likes me well!
And light and kind these men that are not kings,
And sweet my sisters here, who toil and tend."

What have I done for these to make them thus ?
Why, if I love them, should those childreo know ?
I pray take up yon pretty Sâkya boy
Who flung us flowers, and let him ride with me.
How good it is to reign in realms like this !
How simple pleasure is, if these be pleased Because I come abroad ! How many things
I need not if such little households hold
Enough to make our city full of smiles !
Drive, Channa ! through the gates, and let me see More of this gracious world I have not known "

So passed they through the gates, a joyous crowd
• Throoging about the wheels, whereof some ran
Before the oxen, throwing wreaths, some stroked Their silkeo flaoks, some brought them rice and cakes,
All crying, "Jai ! jai ! for our noble Prince !"
Thus all the path was kept with gladsome looks
And filled with fair sights—for the king's word was That such should be—when midway in the road,
Slow tottering from the hovel where he hid,
Crept forth a wretch in rags, haggard and foul,
An old, old man, whose shrivelled skin, sun-tanned,
Clung like a beast's hide to its fleshless bones.
Bent was his back with load of many days,
His eyepits red with rust of ancient tears,
His dim orbs blear with rheum, his toothless jaws
Wagging with palsy and the fright to see
So many and such joy. One skinny hand
Clutched a worn staff to prop his quavering limbs,
And one was pressed upon the ridge of ribs

Wheoce came 10 gasps the heavy painful breath
 "Alms!" moaned he, "give, good people! for I die
 To-morrow or the next day!" then the cough
 Choked him, but still he stretched his palm, and stood Blinking, and groaning 'mid his spasms, "Alms!"
 Then those around had wrenched his feeble feet
 Aside, and thrust him from the road again,
 Saying, "The Prince! dost see? get to thy lair!"
 But that Siddârtha cried, "Let be! let be!
 Chanoa! what thing is this who seems a mao,
 Yet surely only seems, being so bowed,
 So miserable, so horrible, so sad?
 Are men born sometimes thus? What meaneth he Moaning 'to-morrow or next day I die?'
 Finds he no food that so his bones jut forth?
 What woe hath happeed to this piteous one?"
 Then answer made the chariotceer, "Sweet Prince!
 This is no other than an aged man,
 Some fourscore years ago his back was straight,
 His eye bright, and his body goodly now
 The thievish years have sucked his sap away,
 Pillaged his strenght aod filched his will and wit;
 His lamp has lost its oil, the wick burns black,
 What life he keeps is one poor lingering spark
 Which flickers for the finish such is age, Why should your Highness heed?" Then spake the Prince
 "But shall this come to others, or to all,
 Or is it rare that one should be as he?"
 "Most noble," answered Channa, "even as he,
 Will all these grow if they shall live so long"
 "But," quoth the Prince, "if I shall live as loog

Shall I be thus ; and if Yasôdhara
 Live fourscore years, is this old age for her,
 Jâlîni, little Hasta, Gautami,
 And Gunga, and the others ? ” “ Yea, great Sir ! ”
 The charioteer replied Then spake the Prince • “ Turn back, and drive me to my house again !
 I have seen that I did not think to see.”

Which poodering, to his beaucous Court returned
 Wistful Siddârtha, sad of mien and mood ,
 Nor tasted he the white cakes nor the fruits
 Spread for the evening feast, nor once looked up
 While the best palace-dancers strove to charm
 Nor spake—save one sad thing—when wofully
 Yasôdhara sank to his feet and wept,
 Sighing, “ Hath not my Lord comfort in me ? ”
 “ Ah, Sweet ! ” he said, “ such comfort that my soul
 Aches, thinking it must end, for it will end,
 And we shall both grow old, Yasôdhara !
 Loveless, unlovely, weak, and old, and bowed
 Nay, though we looked up love and life with lips
 So close that night and day our breaths grew one,
 Time would thrust in between to filch away
 My passion and thy grace, as black Night steals
 The rose-gleams from yon peak, which fade to grey
 And are not seen to fade This have I found,
 And all my heart is darkened with its dread,
 And all my heart is fixed to think how Love
 Might save its sweetness from the slayer, Time,
 Who makes men old ” So through that night he sat
 Sleepless, uncomfôrted

And all that night

The King Suddhōdana dreamed troublous dreams.
The first fear of his vision was a flag
Broad, glorious, glistening with a golden sun,
The mark of Indra, but a strong wind blew,
Rending its folds divine, and dashing it
Into the dust, where at a concourse came
Of shadowy Ones, who took the spoiled silk up
And bore it eastward from the city gates
The second fear was ten huge elephants,
With silver tusks and feet that shook the earth,
Trampling the southern road in mighty march,
And he who sat upon the foremost beast
Was the King's son—the others followed him
The third fear of the vision was a car,
Shining with blinding light, which four steeds drew,
Sooting white smoke and champing fiery foam,
And in the car the Prince Siddārtha sat
The fourth fear was a wheel which turned and turned,
With nave of burning gold and jewelled spokes,
And strange things written on the binding tire,
Which seemed both fire and music as it whirled
The fifth fear was a mighty drum, set down
Midway between the city and the hills,
On which the Prince beat with an iron mace,
So that the sound pealed like a thunderstorm,
Rolling around the sky and far away
The sixth fear was a tower, which rose and rose High o'er the city till its stately head
Shone crowned with clouds, and on the top the Prince Stood, scattering from both hands, this way and that,
Gems of most lovely light, as if it rained
Jacynths and rubies, and the whole world came,

Striving to seize those treasures as they fell Towards the four quarters But the seventh fear was A noise of wailing, and behold six men
 Who wept and gnashed their teeth, and laid their palms
 Upon their mouths, walking disconsolate

These seven fears made the vision of his sleep,
 But none of all his wisest dream-readers
 Could tell their meaning Then the King was wroth, Saying, "There cometh evil to my house,
 And none of ye have wit to help me know
 What the great gods portend sending me this "
 So in the city men went sorrowful
 Because the King had dreamed seven signs of fear
 Which none could read, but to the gate there came An aged man, in robe of deer-skin clad,
 By guise a hermit, known to none, he cried,
 "Bring me before the King, for I can read
 The vision of his sleep," who, when he heard
 The sevenfold mysteries of the midnight dream,
 Bowed reverent and said, "O Maharaj!
 I hail this favoured House, whence shall arise
 A wider-reaching splendour than the sun's!
 Lo! all these seven fears are seven joys,
 Whereof the first, where thou didst see a flag—
 Broad, glorious, gilt with Indra's badge—cast down
 And carried out, did signify the end
 Of old faiths and beginning of the new,
 For there is change with gods not less than men,
 And as the days pass kalpas pass—it length
 The ten great elephants that shook the earth
 The ten great gifts of wisdom signify,

Lo strength whereof the Prince shall quit his state
And shake the world with passage of the Truth
The four flame-breathing horses of the car
Are those four fearless virtues which shall bring Thy son from doubt and gloom to gladsome light,
The wheel that turned with nave of burning gold
Was that most precious Wheel of perfect Law
Which he shall turn to sight of all the world
The mighty drum whereon the Prince did beat,
Till the sound filled all lands, doth signify
The thunder of the preaching of the Word Which he shall preach, the tower that grew to

The growing of the Gospel of this Buddha Sets forth, and those rare jewels scattered thence
The untold treasures are of that good Law
To gods and men dear and desirable
Such is the interpretation of the tower,
But for those six men weeping with shut mouths,
They are the six chief teachers whom thy son
Shall, with bright truth and speech unanswerable,
Convince of foolishness O King! rejoice,
The fortune of my Lord the Prince is more Than kingdoms, and his hermit-rags will be Beyond fine cloths of gold This was thy dream!
And in seven nights and days these things shall fall"
So spake the holy man, and lowly made
The eight prostrations, touching thrice the ground, Then turned and passed, but when the King bade send

A rich gift after him, the messengers Brought word, "We came to where he entered in

At Chandra's temple, but within was none
 Save a grey owl which fluttered from the shine "
 The gods come sometimes thus

But the sad King
 marvelled, and gave command that new delights
 Be compassed to enthral Siddārtha's heart
 Amid those dancers of his pleasure-house,
 Also he set at all the brazen doors
 A double guard

Yet who shall shut out Fate!

For once again the spirit of the Prince
 Was moved to see this world beyond his gates,
 This life of man, so pleasant, if its waves
 Ran not to waste and woful finishing
 In Time's dry sands "I pray you let me view
 Our city as it is," such was his prayer
 To King Suddhōdana "Your Majesty
 In tender heed hath warned the folk before
 To put away ill things and common sights,
 And make their faces glad to gladden me,
 And all the causeways gay, yet have I learned
 This is not daily life, and if I stand
 Nearest, my father, to the realm and thee,
 Fain would I know the people and the streets,
 Their simple usual ways, and workday deeds,
 And lives which those men live who are not kings
 Give me good leave, dear Lord! to pass unknown
 Beyond my happy gardens, I shall come
 The more contented to their peace again,
 Or wiser, father, if not well content

Therefore, I pray thee, let me go at will
To-morrow, with my servants, through the streets "
And the King said, amidst his Ministers,
"Belike this second flight may meed the first Note how the falcion starts at every sight
New from his hood, but what a quiet eye
Cometh of freedom, let my son see all,
And bid them bring me tidings of his mind "

Thus on the morrow, when the noon was come,
The Prince and Channa passed beyond the gates,
Which opened to the signet of the King,
Yet knew not they who rolled the great doors back
It was the King's son in that merchant's robe,
And in the clerkly dress his charoteer
Forth fared they by the common way afoot,
Mingling with all the Sakya citizens,
Seeing the glad and sad things of the town
The painted streets alive with hum of noon,
The traders cross-legged 'mid their spice and grain,
The buyers with their mooney in the cloth,
The war of words to cheapeo this or that,
The shout to clear the road, the huge stone wheels,
The strong slow oxen and their rustling loads,
The singing bearers with the palanquins,
The broad-necked hamals sweating in the sun,
The housewives bearing water from the well
With balanced chatties, and athwart their hips
The black-eyed babes, the fly-swarmed sweetmeat shops,
The weaver at his loom, the cotton-bow
Twanging, the millstones grinding meal, the dogs

Prowling for orts, the skilful armourer
 With tong aod hammer linking shirts of mail,
 The blacksmith with a mattock and a spear
 Reddening together in his coals, the school
 Where roud their Guru, to a grave half-mooo,
 The Sâkya children sang the mantras through,
 And learned the greater and the lesser gods,
 The dyers stretching waistcloths in the sun
 Wet from the vats—orange, and rose, and green;
 The soldiers clanking past with swords and shields,
 The camel-drivers rocking oo the humps,
 The Brahmas proud, the martial Kshatriya,
 The humble toiling Sudra, here a throng
 Gathered to watch some chattering snake-tamer
 Wind round his wrist the living jewellery
 Of asp aod nâg, or charm the hooded death
 To angry dance with drone of beaded gourd,
 There a long line of drums aod horos, which went,
 With steeds gay painted and silk canopies,
 To bring the young bride home, and here a wife
 Stealing with cakes and garlands to the god
 To pray her husband's safe return from trade,
 Or beg a boy next birth, hard by the bootlis
 Where the swart potters beat the noisy brass
 For lamps and lotas, thence, by temple walls
 And gateways, to the river and the bridge
 Uoder the city walls

These had they passed
 When from the roadside moaned a mournful voice,
 "Help, masters! lift me to my feet, oh, help!
 Or I shall die before I reach my house!"
 A stricken wretch it was, whose quivering frame,

Caught by some deadly plague, lay to the dust
Writhing, with fiery purple blotches specked
The chill sweat beaded on his brow, his mouth
Was dragged awry with twitchings of sore pao,
The wild eyes swam with toward agony
Gasping, he clutched the grass to rise, and rose
Half-way, then sank, with quaking feeble limbs
Aod scream of terror, crying, "Ah, the pain!
Good people, help!" whereon Siddârtha ran,
Lifted the woful man with tender haods,
With sweet looks laid the sick head on his knee,
And, while his soft touch comforted the wretch,
Asked, "Brother, what is ill with thee? what harm
Hath fallen? wherefore canst thou not arise?
Why is it, Channa, that he pants and moans,
Aod gasps to speak, and sighs so pitiful?"
Then spake the charioteer "Great Prince! this man
Is smitten with some pest, his elements
Are all confounded, in his veins the blood,
Which ran a wholesome river, leaps and boils
A fiery flood, his heart, which kept good time,
Beats like an ill-played drum-skin, quick and slow,
His sinews slacken like a bowstring slipped,
The strength is gone from ham, and loin, aod oeck,
And all the grace aod joy of manhood fled
This is a sick man with the fit upoo him
See how he plucks and plocks to seize his grief,
And rolls his bloodshot orbs, and grinds his teeth,
And draws his breath as if 'twere choking smoke!
Lo! oow he would be dead, but shall oot die
Until the plague hath had its work in him,
Killiog the nerves which die before the life;

Then, when his strings have cracked with agony
 And all his bones are empty of the sense
 'To ache, the plague will quit and light elsewhere.
 Oh, sir ! it is not good to hold him so !

The harm may pass, and strike thee, even thee "
 But spake the Prince, still comforting the man,
 "And are there others, are there many thus ?
 Or might it be to me as now with him ? "

"Great Lord ! " answered the charioteer, "this comes

In many forms to all men , griefs and wounds,
 Sickness and tetter, palsies, leprosies,
 Hot fevers, watery wastings, issues, blains
 Befall all flesh and enter everywhere "

"Come such ills unobserved ? " the Prince inquired
 And Channa said, "Like the sly snake they come
 That stings unseen , like the striped murderer,
 Who waits to spring from the Karunda bush,
 Hiding beside the jungle path , or like
 The lightning, striking these and sparing those,
 As chance may send "

"Then all men live in fear ? "

"So live they, Prince ! "

"And none can say, 'I sleep Happy and whole to-night, and so shall wake ? ' "
 "None say it."

"And the end of many aches,
 Which come unseen, and will come when they come,
 Is this, a broken body and sad mind,
 And so old age ? "

"Yea, if men last as long "

"But if they cannot bear their agonies,

Or if they will oot bear, and seek a term,
 Or if they bear, and be, as this man is,
 Too weak except for groans, and so still live,
 Aod growing old, grow older, then—what end ?”
 “They die, Prince”

“Die ?”

“Yea, at the last comes Death,
 In whatsoever way, whatever hour
 Some few grow old, most suffer aod fall sick,
 But all must die—behold, where comes the Dead !”

Then did Siddārtha raise his eyes, and see Fast pacing towards the river-brink a band
 Of wailing people, foremost one who swung
 A earthen bowl with lighted coals, behind
 The kinsmen, shorn, with mourning marks, ungirt, Crying aloud, “O Rama, Rama, hear !
 Call upon Rama, brothers,” next the bier,
 Kist of four poles with bamboos interlaced,
 Whereon lay—stark and stiff, feet foremost, lean,
 Chapfallen, sightless, hollow-flanked, a-grin,
 Sprinkled with red and yellow dust—the Dead,
 Whom at the four-went ways they turned head first,
 And crying “Rama, Rama !” carried oo
 To where a pile was reared beside the stream.
 Thereoo they laid him, building fuel up—
 Good sleep hath ooe that slumbers oo that bed !
 He shall not wake for cold, albeit he lies Naked to all the airs—for sooo they set
 The red flame to the corners four, which crept,
 And licked, aod flickered, fioding out his flesh
 And feeding oo it with swift hissing tongues,

And crackle of parched skin, and snap of joint;
Till the fat smoke thinned and the ashes sank
Scarlet and grey, with here and there a bone
White midst the grey—the total of the man.

Then spake the Prince: "Is this the end which comes
To all who live?"

"This is the end that comes
To all," quoth Channa, "he upon the pyre—
Whose remnants are so petty that the crows
Caw hungrily, then quit the fruitless feast—
Ate, drank, laughed, loved, and lived, and liked life well.

Then came—who knows?—some gust of jungle wind,

A stumble on the path, a taint in the tank,
A snake's nip, half a span of angry steel,
A chill, a fishbone, or a falling tile,
And life was over and the man is dead
No appetites, no pleasures, and no pains
Hath such; the kiss upon his lips is nought,
The fire-scorch nought, he smelleth not his flesh
A-roast, nor yet the sandal and the spice
They burn, the taste is emptied from his mouth,
The hearing of his ear is clogged, the sight
Is blinded in his eyes, those whom he loved
Wail desolate, for even that must go,
The body which was lamp unto the life,
Or worms will have a horrid feast of it
Here is the common destiny of flesh
The high and low, the good and bad, must die.

And then, 'tis taught, begin anew and live
 Somewhere, somehow—who knows?—and so again
 The pangs, the parting, and the lighted pile —
 Such is mao's round "

But lo! Siddārtha turned Eyes gleaning with divine tears to the sky,
 Eyes lit with heavenly pity to the earth,
 From sky to earth he looked, from earth to sky,
 As if his spirit sought in lonely flight
 Some far-off vision, linking this and that,
 Lost—past—but searchable, but seen, but known
 Then cried he, while his lifted countenance
 Glowed with the burning passion of a love
 Unspeakable, the ardour of a hope
 Boundless, insatiate "Oh! suffering world,
 Oh! known and unknown of my common flesh,
 Caught in this common net of death and woe,
 And life which binds to both! I see, I feel
 The vastness of the agony of earth,
 The vainness of its joys, the mockery
 Of all its best, the anguish of its worst,
 Since pleasures end in pain, and youth in age,
 And love in loss, and life in hateful death,
 And death in unknown lives, which will but yoke
 Men to their wheel again to whirl the round
 Of false delights and woes that are not false
 Me too this lure hath cheated, so it seemed Lovely to live, and life a sunlit stream
 For ever flowing in a changeless peace,
 Whereas the foolish ripple of the flood
 Dances so lightly down by bloom and law
 Only to pour its crystal quicker

Into the foul salt sea The veil is rent
Which blinded me ! I am as all these men
Who cry upon their gods and are not heard,
Or are not heeded—yet there must be aid !
For them and me and all there must be help !
Perchance the gods have need of help themselves,
Being so feeble that when sad lips cry
They cannot save ! I would not let one cry
Whom I could save ! How can it be that Brahm
Would make a world and keep it miserable,
Since, if, all-powerful, he leaves it so,
He is not good, and if not powerful,
He is not God ?—Channa ! lead home again !
It is enough ! mine eyes have seen enough ! ”

Which when the King heard, at the gates he set
A triple guard , and bade no man should pass
By day or night, issuing or entering in,
Until the days were numbered of that dream

BOOK THE FOURTH

BUT, when the days were numbered, then befell
The parting of our Lord—which was to be—
Whereby came wailing to the Golden Home,
Woe to the King and sorrow o'er the land,
But for all flesh deliverance, and that Law
Which whoso hears—the same shall make him free

Softly the Indian night sinks on the plains
At full moon, in the month of Chaitra Shud,
When mangoes redden and the asôka buds
Sweeten the breeze, and Rama's birthday comes,
And all the fields are glad and all the towns
Softly that night fell over Vishramvan,
Fragrant with blooms and jewelled thick with stars,
And cool with mountain airs sighing adown
From snow-flats on Himâla high outspread,
For the moon swung above the eastern peaks,
Climbing the spangled vault, and lighting clear
Rohini's ripples, and the hills and vales,
And all the sleeping land, and near at hand
Silvering those roof-tops of the pleasure-house, Where nothing stirred nor sign of watching was,
Save at the outer gates, whose warders cried
Mudra, the watchword, and the countersign
Angana, and the watch-drums beat a round,
Whereat the earth lay still, except for yelp

Of prowling jackals, and the ceaseless trill
Of crickets in the garden grounds

Within—

Where the moon glittered through the lace-worked stone,

Lighting the walls of pearl-shell and the floors
Paved with veined marble—softly fell her beams
On such rare company of Indian girls,
It seemed some chamber sweet in Paradise
Where Devis rested. All the chosen ones
Of Prince Siddârtha's pleasure-home were there,
The brightest and most faithful of the Court;
Each form so lovely in the peace of sleep,
That you had said "This is the pearl of all!"
Save that beside her or beyond her lay
Fairer and fairer, till the pleased gaze
Roamed o'er that feast of beauty as it roams
From gem to gem in some great goldsmith-work,
Caught by each colour till the next is seen.
With careless grace they lay, their soft brown limbs
Part hidden, part revealed, then glossy hair
Bound back with gold or flowers, or flowing loose
In black waves down the shapely nape and neck.
Lulled into pleasant dreams by happy toils,
They slept, no wearier than jewelled birds
Which sing and love all day, then under wing
Fold head, till morn bids sing and love again
Lamps of chased silver swinging from the roof
In silver chains, and fed with perfumed oils,
Made with the moonbeams tender lights and shades,
Whereby were seen the perfect lines of grace,
The bosom's placid heave, the soft stained palms

Drooping or elased, the faces fair and dark,
The great arched brows, the parted lips, the teeth
Like pearls a merchant picks to make a string,
The satio-lidded eyes, with lashes dropped
Sweeping the delicate cheeks, the rounded wrists,
The smooth small feet with bells and bangles deeked,
Triokling low music where some sleeper moved,
Breaking her smiling dream of some new dance
Praised by the Prince, some magic ring to find,
Some fairy love-gift Here one lay full-length,
Her vina by her cheek, and in its strings
The little fingers still all interlaced
As when the last notes of her light song played
Those ridint eyes to sleep, and sealed her own.
Another slumbered folding in her arms
A desert-antelope, its slender head
Buried with black-sloped horns between her breasts,
Soft-nestling, it was eating—when both drowsed—
Red roses, and her loosening hand still held
A rose half-mumbled, while a rose-leaf curled
Between the deer's lips Here two friends had dozed
Together, weaving môgra-buds, which bound
Their sister-sweetness in a starry chain,
Linking them limb to limb and heart to heart,
One pillowed on the blossoms, one on her
Another, ere she slept, was stringing stones
To make a necklet—agate, onyx, sard,
Coral, and moonstone—round her wrist it gleamed
A coil of splendid colour, while she held,
Unthreaded yet, the bead to close it up—
Green turkis, carved with golden gods and scripts
Lulled by the cadence of the garden stream,

Thus lay they on the clustered carpets, each
 A girlish rose with shut leaves, waiting dawn
 To open and make daylight beautiful.
 This was the ante-chamber of the Prince ;
 But at the purdah's fringe the sweetest slept—
 Gunga and Gotami—chief ministers
 In that still House of love.

The purdah hung,

Crimson and blue, with brodered threads of gold,
 Across a portal carved in sandal-wood ,
 Whence by three steps the way was to the bower
 Of inmost splendour, and the marriage-couch
 Set on a dais soft with silver cloths,
 Where the foot fell as though it trod on piles
 Of neem-blooms All the walls were plates of pearl,
 Cut shapely from the shells of Lanka's wave ,
 And o'er the alabaster roof there ran
 Rich inlayings of lotus and of bird,
 Wrought in skilled work of lazulite and jade,
 Jacynth and jasper ; woven round the dome,
 And down the sides, and all about the frames
 Wherein were set the fretted lattices,
 Through which there breathed, with moonlight and cool airs,
 Scents from the shell-flowers and the jasmine sprays ,
 Not bringing thither grace or tenderness
 Sweeter than shed from those fair presences
 Within the place—the beauteous Sākya Prince,
 And hers, the stately, bright Yasôdhara

Half risen from her soft nest at his side,
 The chuddar fallen to her wust, her brow

Laid in both palms, the lovely Princess leaned
With heaving bosom and fast-falling tears
Thrice with her lips she touched Siddârtha's hand,
And at the third kiss moaned, "Awake, my Lord!
Give me the comfort of thy speech!" Then he "What is it with thee, O my life?" but still
She moaned anew before the words would come,
Then spake, "Alas, my Prince! I sank to sleep
Most happy, for the babe I bear of thee
Quickened this eve, and at my heart there beat
That double pulse of life and joy and love
Whose happy music lulled me, but—ah!—
In slumber I beheld three sights of dread,
With thought whereof my heart is throbbing yet
I saw a white bull with wide-branching horns,
A lord of pastures, pacing through the streets,
Bearing upon his front a gem which shone
As if some star had dropped to glitter there,
Or like the kantha-stone the great Snake keeps
To make bright daylight underneath the earth
Slow through the streets towards the gates he paced,
And none could stay him, though there came a voice
From Indra's temple, 'If ye stay him not,
The glory of the city goeth forth.'
Yet none could stay him. Then I wept aloud,
And locked my arms about his neck, and strove,
And bade them bar the gates, but that ox-king
Bellowed, and, lightly tossing free his crest,
Broke from my clasp, and bursting through the bars,
Trampled the warders down and passed away
The next strange dream was this. Four Presences Splendid, with shining eyes, so beautiful

They seemed the Regents of the Earth who dwell
 On Mount Sumeru, lighting from the sky
 With retinue of countless heavenly ones,
 Swift swept unto our city, where I saw
 The golden flag of Indra on the gate
 Flutter and fall; and lo¹ there rose instead
 A glorious banner, all the folds whereof
 Rippled with flashing fire of rubies sewn
 Thick on the silver threads, the rays wherefrom
 Set forth new words and weighty sentences
 Whose message made all living creatures glad,
 And from the east the wind of sunrise blew
 With tender waft, opening those jewelled scrolls
 So that all flesh might read, and wondrous blooms—
 Plucked in wint clime I know not—fell in showers, Coloured as none are coloured in our groves”

Then spake the Prince “All this, my Lotusflower¹
 Was good to see”

“Ay, Lord,” the Princess said,
 “Save that it ended with a voice of fear
 Crying, ‘The time is nigh¹ the time is nigh!’
 Thereat the third dream came, for when I sought
 Thy side, sweet Lord¹ ah, on our bed there lay
 An unpressed pillow and an empty robe—
 Nothing of thee but those¹—nothing of thee,
 Who art my life and light, my king, my world¹
 And, sleeping still, I rose, and sleeping saw Thy belt of pearls, tied here below my breasts,
 Change to a stinging snake, my ankle-rings
 Fall off, my golden bangles part and fall.

The jasmynes in my hair wither to dust,
 While this our bridal-couch sank to the ground,
 And something rent the crimson purdah down.
 Then far away I heard the white bull low,
 And far away the embroidered banner flap,
 And once again that cry, 'The time is come!'
 But with that cry—which shakes my spirit still—
 I woke! O Prince! what may such visions mean
 Except I die, or—worse than any death—
 Thou shouldst forsake me, or be taken?"

Soft

As the last smile of sunset was the look
 Siddhartha bent upon his weeping wife
 "Comfort thee, dear!" he said, "if comfort lives
 In changeless love! for though thy dreams may be Shadows of things to come, and though the gods
 Are shaken in their seats, and though the world
 Stands nigh, perchance, to know some way of help,
 Yet, whatsoever fall to thee and me,
 Be sure I loved and love Yasôdhara
 Thou knowest how I muse these many moons,
 Seeking to save the sad earth I have seen,
 And when the time comes, that which will be will
 But if my soul yearns sore for souls unknown,
 And if I grieve for griefs which are not mine,
 Judge how my high-winged thoughts must hover here
 O'er all these lives that share and sweeten mine—
 So dear! and thine the dearest, gentlest, best,
 And nearest Ah, thou mother of my babe!
 Whose body mixed with mine for this fair hope,
 When most my spirit wanders, raging round
 The lands and seas—as full of ruth for me!

As the far-flying dove is full of ruth
 For her twin nestlings—ever it has come
 Home with glad wing and passionate plumes to thee,
 Who art the sweetness of my kind best seen,
 The utmost of their good, the tenderest
 Of all their tenderness, mine most of all
 Therefore, whatever after this betide,
 Bethink thee of that lordly bull which lowed,
 That jewelled banner in thy dream which waved
 Its folds departing, and of this be sure,
 Always I loved and always love thee well,
 And what I sought for all sought most for thee
 But thou, take comfort, and, if sorrow falls,
 Take comfort still in deeming if there may be A way to peace on earth by woes of ours,
 And have with this embrace what faithful love
 Can think of thanks or frame for benison—
 Too little, seeing love's strong self is weak—
 Yet kiss me on the mouth, and drink these words
 From heart to heart therewith, that thou mayst
 know—

What others will not—that I loved thee most Because I loved so well all living souls
 Now, Princess' rest, for I will rise and watch "

Then in her tears she slept, but sleeping sighed—
 As if that vision passed again—"The time!
 The time is come!" Whereat Siddārtha turned,
 And, lo! the moon shone by the Crab! the stars
 In that same silver order long foretold Stood ranged to say, "This is the night!—choose thou

The way of greatness or the way of good
To reign a King of kings, or wander lone, Crownless and homeless, that the world be helped ”
Moreover, with the whispers of the gloom,
Came to his ears again that warning soog,
As when the Devas spoke upon the wind
And surely Gods were round about the place
Watching our Lord, who watched the shining stars

“I will depart,” he spake, “the hour is come !
Thy tender lips, dear Sleeper, summon me
To that which saves the earth but sunders us,
And in the silence of yon sky I read
My fated message flashing Unto this Came I, and unto this all nights and days
Have led me, for I will not have that crown
Which may be mine I lay aside those realms
Which wait the gleaming of my naked sword.
My chariot shall not roll with bloody wheels
From victory to victory, till earth
Wears the red record of my name I choose
To tread its paths with patient, stoic feet,
Making its dust my bed, its loohest wastes
My dwelling, and its meanest things my mates,
Clad in no prouder garb than outcasts wear,
Fed with no meats save what the charitable Give of their will, sheltered by no more pomp
Than the dim cave lends or the jungle-bush
This will I do because the woful cry
Of life and all flesh living cometh up
Into my ears, and all my soul is full Of pity for the sickness of this world ;

Which I will heal, if healing may be found
By uttermost renouncing and strong strife
For which of all the great and lesser gods
Have power or pity? Who hath seen them—who?
What have they wrought to help their worshippers?
How hath it steadied man to pray, and pay
Tithes of the corn and oil, to chant the charms,
To slay the shrieking sacrifice, to rear
The stately fane, to feed the priests, and call
On Vishnu, Shiva, Surya, who save
None—not the worthiest—from the griefs that teach
Those litanies of flattery and fear
Ascending day by day, like wasted smoke?
Hath any of my brothers 'scaped thereby
The aches of life, the stings of love and loss,
The fiery fever and the ague-shrike,
The slow, dull, sinking into withered age,
The horrible dark death—and what beyond
Waits—till the whirling wheel comes up again,
And new lives bring new sorrows to be borne,
New generations for the new desires
Which have their end in the old mockeries?
Hath any of my tender sisters found
Fruit of the fast or harvest of the hymn,
Or bought one pang the less at bearing-time
For white curds offered and trim tulsi-leaves?
Nay, it may be some of the Gods are good
And evil some, but all in action weak,
Both pitiful and pitiless, and both—
As men are—bound upon this wheel of change,
Knowing the former and the after lives
For so our scriptures truly seem to teach,

That—ooce, aod wheresoe'er, and whence begun—
Life runs its rounds of living, climbing up
From mote, and gnat, and worm, reptile, aod fish,
Bird and shagged beast, man, demon, deva, God,
To clod aod mote again, so are we kin
To all that is, and thus, if one might save Man from his curse, the whole wide world should share

The lightened horror of this ignorance
Whose shadow is still fear, and cruelty
Its bitter pastime Yea, if one might save!
And meaos must be! There must be refuge! Meo
Perished in winter-winds till one smote fire
From flint-stones coldly hiding what they held,
The red spark treasured from the kindling sun
They gorged on flesh like wolves, till one sowed corn,
Which grew a weed, yet makes the life of man,
They mowed and babbled till some tongue struck speech,

And patient fingers framed the lettered sound
What good gift have my brothers, bot it came From search and strife aod loving sacrifice?
If one, theo, being great and fortunate,
Rich, dowered with health and ease, from birth desigod

To rule—if he would rule—a King of kings,
If one, not tired with life's loog day but glad
I' the freshness of its morning, one not cloyed
With love's delicious feasts, but hungry still,
If one not worn and wrinkled, sadly sage,
But joyous to the glory aod the grace
That mix with evils here, and free to choose

Earth's loveliest at his will one even as I,
Who ache not, lack not, grieve not, save with griefs
Which are not mine, except as I am man,—
If such a one, having so much to give,
Gave all, laying it down for love of men,
And thenceforth spent himself to search for truth,
Wringing the secret of deliverance forth,
Whether it lurks in hells or hide in heavens,
Or hover, unrevealed, nigh unto all
Surely at last, far off, sometime, somewhere,
The veil would lift for his deep-searching eyes,
The road would open for his painful feet,
That should be won for which he lost the world,
And Death might find him conqueror of death
This will I do, who have a realm to lose,
Because I love my realm, because my heart
Beats with each throb of all the hearts that ache, Known and unknown, these that are mine and those Which shall be mine, a thousand million more
Saved by this sacrifice I offer now.
Oh, summoning stars! I come! Oh, mournful earth!
For thee and thine I lay aside my youth,
My throne, my joys, my golden days, my nights,
My happy palace—and thine arms, sweet Queen!
Harder to put aside than all the rest!
Yet thee, too, I shall save, saving this earth,
And that which stirs within thy tender womb,
My child, the hidden blossom of our loves,
Whom if I want to bless my mind will fail
Wife! child! father! and people! ye must share
A little while the anguish of this hour
That light may break and all flesh learn the Law

Now am I fixed, and now I will depart,
Never to come again, till what I seek Be found—if fervent search and strife avail ”

So, with his brow he touched her feet, and bent
The farewell of food eyes, unutterable,
Upon her sleeping face, still wet with tears,
And thrice around the bed in reverence,
As though it were an altar, softly stepped
With clasped hands laid upon his beating heart,
“ For never,” spake he, “ lie I there again ! ”
And thrice he made to go, but thrice came back,
So strong her beauty was, so large his love
Then, o’er his head drawing his cloth, he turned And raised the purdah’s edge

There drooped, close-hushed,
In such sealed sleep as water-lilies know,
That lovely garden of his Indian girls,
The twin dark-petalled lotus-buds of all—
Gunga and Gotami—on either side,
And those, their silk-leaved sisterhood, beyond “ Pleasant ye are to me, sweet friends ! ” he said,
“ And dear to leave, yet, if I leave ye not,
What else will come to all of us save eld
Without assuage and death without avail ?
Lo ! as ye lie asleep so must ye lie
A-dead, and when the rose dies where are gone
Its scent and splendour ? when the lamp is drained
Whither is fled the flame ? Press heavy, Night !
Upon their down-dropped lids, and seal their lips,
That no tear stay me and no faithful voice
For all the brighter that these made my life,

The bitterer it is that they and I,
 And all, should live as trees do—so much spring,
 Such and such rains and frosts, such winter-times,
 And then dead leaves, with maybe spring again,
 Or axe-stroke at the root. This will not I,
 Whose life here was a God's!—this would not I,
 Though all my days were godlike, while men moan

Under their darkness Therefore farewell, friends!
 While life is good to give, I give, and go
 To seek deliverance and that unknown Light!"

Then, lightly treading where those sleepers lay,
 Into the night Siddârtha passed. its eyes,
 The watchful stars, looked love on him its breath,
 The wandering wind, kissed his robe's fluttered fringe;

The garden-blossoms, folded for the dawn,
 Opened their velvet hearts to waft him scents
 From pink and purple censers o'er the land,
 From Himalay unto the Indian Sea,
 A tremor spread, as if earth's soul beneath
 Stirred with an unknown hope, and holy books—
 Which tell the story of our Lord—say, too
 That rich celestial musics thrilled the air
 From hosts on hosts of shining ones, who thronged
 Eastward and westward, making bright the night—
 Northward and southward, making glad the ground
 Also those four dread Regents of the Earth,
 Descending at the doorway, two by two,—
 With their bright legions of Invisibles
 In arms of sapphire, silver, gold, and pearl—

Watched with joined hands the Indian Prince, who stood,
 His tearful eyes raised to the stars, and lips
 Close-set with purpose of prodigious love

Then strode he forth into the gloom, and cried .
 "Chaooa, awake ! and bring out Kantaka !"
 "What would my Lord ?" the charioteer replied—
 Slow-rising from his place beside the gate—
 "To ride at night when all the ways are dark !"

"Speak low," Siddartha said "and bring my horse,
 For now the hour is come when I should quit
 This golden prison, where my heart lives caged,
 To find the truth, which henceforth I will seek,
 For all men's sake, until the truth be found "

"Alas ! dear Prince," answered the charioteer,
 "Spake thou for nought those wise and holy men
 Who cast the stars, and bade us wait the time
 When King Suddhâdana's great son should rule
 Realms upon realms, and be a Lord of lords ?
 Wilt thou ride hence and let the rich world slip
 Out of thy grasp, to hold a beggar's bowl ?
 Wilt thou go forth into the friendless waste
 That hast this Paradise of pleasures here ?"

The Prince made answer, "Unto this I came,
 And not for thrones the kingdom that I crave
 Is more than many realms—and all things pass
 To change and death Bring me forth Kantaka !"

"Most honoured," spake again the charioteer,
 "Bethink thee of my Lord thy father's grief!
 Bethink thee of their woe whose bliss thou art—
 How shalt thou help them, first undoing them?"
 Siddârtha answered, "Friend, that love is false
 Which clings to love for selfish sweets of love;
 But I, who love these more than joys of mine—
 Yea, more than joys of theirs—depart to save
 Them and all flesh, if utmost love avail
 Go, bring me Kantaka!"

Theo Chaona said,
 "Master, I go!" and forthwith, mournfully,
 Unto the stall he passed, and from the rack
 Took down the silver bit and bridle-chains,
 Breast-cord and curb, and knitted fast the straps,
 And linked the hooks, and led out Kantaka
 Whom, tethering to the ring, he combed and dressed,
 Stroking the soowy coat to silken gloss,
 Next on the steed he laid the numdah square,
 Fitted the saddle-cloth across, and set
 The saddle fan, drew tight the jewelled girths,
 Buckled the breech-bands and the martingale,
 And made fall both the stirrups of worked gold.
 Then over all he cast a golden oer,
 With tassels of seed-pearl and silken strings,
 And led the great horse to the palace door,
 Where stood the Prince, but when he saw his Lord,
 Right glad he waxed and joyously he neighed,
 Spreading his scarlet nostrils, and the books
 Write, "Surely all had heard Kantaka's neigh,
 And that stroog trampling of his iron heels,

Save that the Devas laid soft unseen wings
Over their ears, and kept the sleepers deaf”

Foodly Siddārtha drew the proud head down,
Patted the shnog neck, and said, “Be still,
White Kantaka! be still, and bear me now
The farthest journey ever rider rode,
For this night take I horse to find the truth,
And where my quest will end yet know I not,
Save that it shall not end until I find
Therefore to-night, good steed, be fierce and bold
Let nothing stay thee, though a thousand blades
Deny the road! let neither wall nor moat
Forbid our flight! Look! if I touch thy flank
And cry, ‘On, Kantaka!’ let whirlwinds lag
Behind thy course! Be fire and air, my horse!
In stead thy Lord, so shalt thou share with him
The greatness of this deed which helps the world,
For therefore ride I, not for men alone,
But for all things which, speechless, share our pain
And have no hope, nor wit to ask for hope
Now, therefore, bear thy master valorously!”

Then in the saddle lightly leaping, he Touched the arched crest, and Kantaka sprang forth
With armed hoofs sparkling on the stones, and ring
Of champing bit, but none did hear that sound,
For that the Suddha Devas, gathering near,
Plucked the red mohra-flowers and strewed them thick
Under his tread, while hands invisible
Muffled the ringing bit and bridle-chains

Moreover, it is written when they came Upon the pavement near the inner gates,
 The Yakshas of the air laid magic cloths
 Under the stallion's feet, so that he went Softly and still

But when they reached the gate
 Of tripled brass—which hardly fivescore men
 Serv'd to unbar and open—lo! the doors
 Rolled back all silently, though one might hear
 In day-time two loss off the thunderous roar
 Of those grim hinges and unwieldy plates.

Also the middle and the outer gates
 Unfolded each their monstrous portals thus
 In silence, as Siddârtha and his steed
 Drew near; while underneath their shadow lay,
 Silent as dead men, all those chosen guards—
 The lance and sword let fall, the shields unbraced,
 Captains and soldiers—for there came a wind,
 Drowsier than blows o'er Malwa's fields of sleep,
 Before the Prince's path, which, being breathed,
 Lulled every sense aswoon and so he passed
 Free from the palace

When the morning star
 Stood half a spear's length from the eastern rim,
 And o'er the earth the breath of morning sigh'd,
 Rippling Anoma's wave, the border-stream,
 Then drew he rein, and leaped to earth, and kissed
 White Kantaka betwixt the ears, and spake
 Full sweet to Channa "This which thou hast done
 Shall bring thee good, and bring all creatures good
 Be sure I love thee always for thy love

Lead back my horse, and take my crest-pearl here,
My princely robes, which henceforth stead me not,
My jewelled sword-belt and my sword, and these
The long looks by its bright edge severed thus
From off my brows Give the King all, and say
Siddârtha prays forget him till he come
Ten times a Prince, with royal wisdom won
From lonely searchings and the strife for light,
Where, if I conquer, lo ! all earth is mine—
Mine by chief service !—tell him—mine by love !
Since there is hope for man only in man,
And none hath sought for this as I will seek,
Who cast away my world to save my world ”

BOOK THE FIFTH

ROUND Rajagriha five fair hills arose,
Guarding King Bimbisâra's sylvan town
Baibhâra, green with lemon-grass and palms ;
Bipulla, at whose foot thin Sarsuti
Steals with warm ripple, shadowy Tapovan, Whose streaming pools mirror black rocks, which ooze

Sovereign earth-butter from their rugged roofs ;
South-east the vulture-peak Sailâgiri,
And eastward Ratnagiri, hill of gems
A winding track, paven with footworn slabs,
Leads thee, by safflower fields and bamboo tufts,
Under dark mangoes and the jujube-trees,
Past milk-white veins of rock and jasper crags,
Low cliff and flats of jungle-flowers, to where The shoulder of that mountain, sloping west,
O'erhangs a cave with wild figs canopied.
Lo ! thou who comest thither, bare thy feet
And bow thy head ! for all this spacious earth
Hath not a spot more dear and hallowed Here
Lord Buddha sate the scorching summers through,
The driving rains, the chilly dawns and eves,
Wearing for all men's sakes the yellow robe,
Eating in beggar's guise the scanty meal
Chanec-gathered from the charitable, at night
Crouched on the grass, homeless, alone while yelped

The sleepless jackals round his cave, or coughs
Of famished tiger from the thicket broke
By day and night here dwelt the World-honoured, Subduing that fair body born for bliss
With fast and frequent watch and search intense
Of silent meditation, so prolonged
That oft-times while he mused—as motionless
As the fixed rock his seat—the squirrel leaped
Upon his knee, the timid quail led forth
Her brood between his feet, and blue doves pecked
The rice-grains from the bowl beside his hand

Thus would he muse from noontide—when the land

Shimmered with heat, and walls and temples danced
To the reeking air—till sunset, noting not
The blazing globe roll down, nor evening glide,
Purple and swift, across the softened fields,
Nor the still coming of the stars, nor throb
Of drum-skins in the busy tow, nor screech
Of owl and night-jar, wholly wrapt from self
In keen unravelling of the threads of thought
And steadfast pacing of life's labyrinths
Thus would he sit till midnight hushed the world,
Save where the beasts of darkness in the brake
Crept and cried out, as fear and hatred cry,
As lust and avarice and anger creep
In the black jungles of man's ignorance
Then aleep he for what space the fleet moon asks
To swim a tenth part of her cloudy sea,
But rose e'er the False-dawn, and stood again
Wistful on some dark platform of his hill,

Watching the sleeping earth with ardent eyes
And thoughts embracing all its living things,
While o'er the waving fields that murmur moved
Which is the kiss of Morn waking the lands,
And in the east that miracle of Day
Gathered and grew. At first a dusk so dim
Night seems still unaware of whispered dawn,
But soon—before the jungle-cock crows twice—
A white verge clear, a widening, brightening white,
High as the herald-star, which fades in floods
Of silver, warming into pale gold, caught
By topmost clouds, and flaming on their rims
To fervent golden glow, flushed from the brink
With saffron, scarlet, crimson, amethyst,
Whereat the sky burns splendid to the blue,
And, robed in raiment of glad light, the King
Of Life and Glory cometh!

Then our Lord,
After the manner of a Rishi, hailed
The rising orb, and went—ablutions made—
Down by the winding path unto the town,
And in the fashion of a Rishi passed
From street to street, with begging-bowl in hand,
Gathering the little pittance of his needs
Soon was it filled, for all the townsmen cried, “Take of our store, great sir!” and “Take of ours!”
Marking his godlike face and eyes enwrapt,
And mothers, when they saw our Lord go by,
Would bid their children fall to kiss his feet,
And lift his robe's hem to their brows, or run
To fill his jar, and fetch him milk and cakes
And oftimes as he paced, gentle and slow

Radiant with heavenly pity, lost in care
 For those he knew not, save as fellow-lives,
 The dark surprised eyes of some Indian maid
 Would dwell in sudden love and worship deep
 On that majestic form, as if she saw Her dreams of tenderest thought made true, and grace

Fairer than mortal fire her breast But he Passed onward with the bowl and yellow robe,
 By mild speech paying all those gifts of hearts,
 Wending his way back to the solitudes
 To sit upon his hill with holy men,
 And hear and ask of wisdom and its roads.

Midway on Ratnagiri's groves of calm,
 Beyond the city, but below the caves,
 Lodged such as hold the body foe to soul,
 And flesh a beast which men must chain and tame
 With bitter pains, till sense of pain is killed,
 And tortured nerves vex torturer no more
 Yogis and Brahmacharis, Bhikshus, all
 A gaunt and mournful band, dwelling apart
 Some day and night had stood with lifted arms,
 Till—drained of blood and withered by disease—
 Their slowly wasting joints and stiffened limbs
 Jutted from sapless shoulders like dead forks
 From forest trunks Others had clenched their hands
 So long and with so fierce a fortitude,
 The claw-like nails grew through the festered palm.
 Some walked on sandals spiked, some with sharp flints

Gashed breast and brow and thigh, scarred these with fire,
 Threaded their flesh with jungle thorns and spits,
 Besmeared with mud and ashes, crouching foul
 In rags of dead men wrapped about their loins.
 Certain there were inhabited the spots
 Where death-pyres smouldered, cowering defiled
 With corpses for their company, and kites
 Screaming around them o'er the funeral-spoils
 Certain who cried five hundred times a day
 The names of Shiva, knit with hissing snakes
 About their sun-tanned necks and hollow flanks,
 One palsied foot drawn up against the ham
 So gathered they, a grievous company,
 Crowns blistered by the blazing heat, eyes bleared,
 Sinews and muscles shrivelled, visages
 Haggard and wan as slain men's, five days dead;
 Here crouched one in the dust who noon by noon
 Meted a thousand grains of millet out,
 Ate it with famished patience, seed by seed,
 And so starved on, there one who bruised his pulse
 With bitter leaves lest palate should be pleased,
 And next, a miserable saint self-maimed,
 Eyeless and tongueless, sexless, crippled, deaf;
 The body by the mind being thus stripped
 For glory of much suffering, and the bliss
 Which they shall win—say holy books—whose woe
 Shames gods that send us woe, and makes men gods
 Stronger to suffer than Hell is to harm

Whom sadly eyeing spake our Lord to one,
 Chief of the woe-begones "Much-suffering sir !

These many moons I dwell upon the hill—
 Who am a seeker of the Truth—and see
 My brothers here, and thee, so piteously
 Self-aogushed, wherefore add ye ills to life
 Which is so evil ?”

Answer made the sage “’Tis written if a man shall mortify
 His flesh, till pain be grown the life he lives
 And death voluptuous rest, such woes shall purge
 Sin’s dross away, aod the soul, purified,
 Soar from the furnace of its sorrow, winged
 For glorious spheres and splendour past all thought ”

“Yoo cloud which floats in heaven,” the Prince replied,
 “Wreathed like gold cloth around yoor Iodra’s throne,
 Rose thither from the tempest-driven sea,
 But it must fall again in tearful drops,
 Trickling through rough aod painful water-ways
 By cleft and nullah aod the muddy flood,
 To Gunga and the sea, wherefrom it spraog Know’st thou, my brother, if it be not thus,
 After their maoy paos, with saints in bliss ?
 Sioce that which rises falls, and that which buys
 Is spent, and if ye buy heav’n with your blood
 In hell’s hard market, when the bargain’s through The toil begins again !”

“It may begin,”
 The hermit moaned “Alas ! we know not this,
 Nor surely anythiog, yet after night
 Day comes, and after turmoil peace, and we

Hate this accursed flesh which clogs the soul
 That fain would rise, so, for the sake of soul,
 We stake brief agonies in game with Gods
 To gain the larger joys "

" Yet if they last
 A myriad years," he said, "they fade at length,
 Those joys; or if not, is there then some life
 Below, above, beyond, so unlike life
 It will not change? Speak! do your Gods endure
 For ever, brothers? "

" Nay," the Yogis said,
 " Only great Brahm endures the Gods but live "

Then spake Lord Buddha " Will ye, being wise,
 As ye seem holy and strong-hearted ones,
 Throw these sore dice, which are your groans and moans,
 For gains which may be dreams, and must have end?
 Will ye, for love of soul, so loathe your flesh,
 So scourge and maim it, that it shall not serve
 To bear the spirit on, searching for home,
 But founder on the track before night-fall,
 Like willing steed o'er-spurred? Will ye, sad sirs!
 Dismantle and dismember this fair house,
 Where we have come to dwell by painful pasts,
 Whose windows give us light—the little light—
 Whereby we gaze abroad to know if dawn
 Will break, and whither winds the better road? "

Then cried they, " We have chosen this for road
 And tread it, Rajaputra! till the close—

Though all its stooes were fire—in trust of death
 Speak, if thou know'st a way more excellent,
 If not, peace go with thee ! ”

Onward he passed,
 Exceeding sorrowful, seeing how men
 Fear so to die they are afraid to fear,
 Lust so to live they dare not love their life,
 But plague it with fierce penances, belike
 To please the Gods who grudge pleasure to man
 Belike to baulk hell by self-kindled hells,
 Belike in holy madness, hoping soul
 May break the better through their wasted flesh
 “ Oh, flowerets of the field ! ” Siddartha said,
 “ Who turn your tender faces to the sun—
 Glad of the light, and grateful with sweet breath
 Of fragrance and these robes of reverence dooned
 Silver and gold and purple—none of ye
 Miss perfect living, none of ye despoil
 Your happy beauty Oh, ye palms ! which rise
 Eager to pierce the sky and drink the wind
 Blown from Malaya and the cool blue seas,
 What secret know ye that ye grow content,
 From time of tender shoot to time of fruit,
 Murmuring such sun-songs from your feathered crowns ?

Ye, too, who dwell so merry in the trees—
 Quick-darting parrots, bee-birds, bulbuls, doves—
 None of ye hate your life, none of ye deem
 To strain to better by foregning oeds !
 But man; who slays ye—being lord—is wise,
 And wisdom, nursed on blind, cometh thus forth
 In self-tormentings ! ”

While the Master spake
 Blew down the mount the dust of pattering feet, White goats and black sheep winding slow their way,

With many a lingering nibble at the tufts,
 And wanderings from the path, where water gleamed
 Or wild figs hung. But always as they strayed
 The herdsman cried, or slung his sling, and kept
 The silly crowd still moving to the plain
 A ewe with couplets in the flock there was,
 Some hurt had lamed one lamb, which toiled behind
 Bleeding, while in the front its fellow skipped,
 And the vexed dam hither and thither ran,
 Fearful to lose this little one or that,
 Which when our Lord did mark, full tenderly
 He took the limping lamb upon his neck,
 Saying, "Poor woolly mother, be at peace!
 Whither thou goest I will bear thy care,
 'Twere all as good to ease one beast of grief
 As sit and watch the sorrows of the world
 In yonder caverns with the priests who pray"

"But," spake he to the herdsmen, "wherefore, friends!

Drive ye the flocks adown under high noon,
 Since 'tis at evening that men fold their sheep,"
 And answer gave the peasants "We are sent
 To fetch a sacrifice of goats five-score,
 And five-score sheep, the which our Lord the King
 Slayeth this night in worship of his gods."
 Then said the Master "I will also go!"
 So paced he patiently, bearing the lamb

Beside the herdsmen in the dust and sun,
The wistful ewe low bleating at his feet.

Whom, when they came ooto the river-side
A woman—dove-eyed, young, with tearful face
And lifted hands—saluted, bending low “Lord ! thou art he,” she said, “who yesterday
Had pity on me in the fig-grove here,
Where I live lone and reared my child, but he Straying amid the blossoms found a snake,
Which twined about his wrist, whilst he did laugh
And tease the quick-forked tongue and opened mouth
Of that cold playmate But, alas ! ere long
He turned so pale and still, I could not think
Why he should cease to play and let my breast
Fall from his lips And one said, ‘ He is sick
Of poison,’ and another, ‘ He will die’
But I, who could not lose my precious boy,
Prayed of them physic, which might bring the light
Back to his eyes, it was so very small,
That kiss-mark of the serpent, and I think
It could not hate him, gracious as he was,
Nor hurt him in his sport. And some one said,
‘ There is a holy man upon the hill—
Lo ! now he passeth in the yellow robe—
Ask of the Rishi if there be a cure
For that which ails thy son’ Whereon I came Trembling to thee, whose brow is like a god’s,
And wept and drew the face-cloth from my babe,
Praying thee tell what simples might be good
And thou, great sir ! didst spurn me not, but gaze
With gentle eyes and touch with patient hand,

Then draw the face-cloth back, saying to me,
 'Yea ! little sister, there is that might heal
 Thee first, and him, if thou couldst fetch the thing ;
 For they who seek physicians bring to them
 What is ordained. Therefore, I pray thee, find Black mustard-seed, a tola, only mark
 Thou take it not from any hand or house
 Where father, mother, child, or slave hath died :
 It shall be well if thou eanst find such seed.'
 Thus didst thou speak, my Lord ! "

The Master smiled

Exceeding tenderly "Yea ! I spake thus,
 Dear Kīśagôtamī ! But didst thou find
 The seed ? "

"I went, Lord, clasping to my breast
 The babe, grown colder, asking at each hut—
 Here in the jungle and towards the town—
 'I pray you, give me mustard, of your grace,
 A tola—black, ' and each who had it gave,
 For all the poor are piteous to the poor,
 But when I asked, 'in my friend's household here
 Hath any peradventure ever died—
 Husband, or wife, or child, or slave ? ' they said :
 O Sister ! what is this you ask ? the dead
 Are very many, and the living few ! '
 So with sad thanks I gave the mustard back,
 And prayed of others, but the others said,
 'Here is the seed, but we have lost our slave ! '
 'Here is the seed, but our good man is dead ! '
 'Here is some seed, but he that sowed it died
 Between the rain-time and the harvesting ! '
 Ah, sir ! I could not find a single house

Where there was mustard-seed and none had died !
Therefore I left my child—who would not suck
Nor smile—beneath the wild-runes by the stream,
To seek thy face and kiss thy feet, and pray
Where I might find this seed and find no death,
If now, indeed, my baby be not dead,
As I do fear, and as they said to me.”

"My sister! thou hast found," the Master said,
 "Searching for what none finds—that bitter balm
 I had to give thee. He thou lovedst slept
 Dead on thy bosom yesterday to-day Thou know'st the whole wide world weeps with thy woe

The grief which all hearts share grows less for one
Lo! I would pour my blood if it could stay
Thy tears and win the secret of that curse
Which makes sweet love our anguish, and which drives—

O'er flowers and pastures to the sacrifice—
As these dumb beasts are driven—men their lords.
I seek that secret. bury thou thy child ! ”

So entered they the city side by side,
The herdsman and the Prince, what time the sun
Gilded slow Sona's distant stream, and threw Long shadows down the street and through the gate Where the Krog's men kept watch. But when these saw

Our Lord bearing the lamb, the guards stood back,
The market-people drew their wains aside,
To the bazaar buyers and sellers stayed

The war of tongues to gaze on that mild face,
 The smith, with lifted hammer in his hand,
 Forgot to strike, the weaver left his web,
 The scribe his scroll, the money-changer lost
 His count of cowries, from the unwatched rice
 Shiva's white bull fed free, the wasted milk
 Ran o'er the lota while the milkers watched
 The passage of our Lord moving so meek,
 With yet so beautiful a majesty.
 But most the women gathering in the doors
 Asked, "Who is this that brings the sacrifice
 So graceful and peace-giving as he goes?
 What is his caste? whence hath he eyes so sweet?
 Can he be Sâkra or the Devaraj?"
 And others said, "It is the holy man
 Who dwelleth with the Rishis on the hill"
 But the Lord paced, in meditation lost, Thinking, "Alas! for all my sheep which have No shepherd, wandering in the night with none
 To guide them, bleating blindly towards the knife
 Of Death, as these dumb beasts which are their kin"

Then some one told the King, "There cometh here
 A holy hermit, bringing down the flock
 Which thou didst bid to crown thy sacrifice"

The King stood in his hall of offering,
 On either hand the white-robed Brahmins ranged Muttered their mantras, feeding still the fire
 Which roared upon the midmost altar There
 From scented woods flickered bright tongues of flame,

Hissing and curling as they licked the gifts
 Of ghee and spices and the Soma juice,
 The joy of Indra Rood about the pile
 A slow, thick, scarlet streamlet smoked and ran,
 Sucked by the sand, but ever rolling down,
 The blood of bleating victims One such lay,
 A spotted goat, long-horned, its head bound back
 With munja grass, at its stretched throat the knife Pressed by a priest, who murmured, "This, dread gods

Of many yajnas cometh as the crown
 From Bimbisāra take ye joy to see
 The spiced blood, and pleasure in the scent
 Of rich flesh roasting 'mid the fragrant flames,
 Let the King's sins be laid upon this goat,
 And let the fire consume them burning it,
 For now I strike "

 But Buddha softly said,
 "Let him not strike, great King!" and therewith knosed

The victim's bonds, none staying him, so great
 His presence was Then, craving leave, he spake
 Of life, which all can take but none can give,
 Life which all creatures love and strive to keep,
 Wonderful, dear, and pleasant unto each,
 Even to the meanest, yea, a boon to all
 Where pity is, for pity makes the world
 Soft to the weak and noble for the strong
 Unto the dumb lips of his flock he lent
 Sad pleading words, showing how man, who prays
 For mercy to the gods, is merciless,
 Being as god to those, albeit all life

Is linked and kin, and what we slay have given Meek tribute of the milk and wool, and set
 Fast trust upon the hands which murder them
 Also he spake of what the holy books
 Do surely teach, how that at death some sink
 To bird and beast, and these rise up to man
 In wanderings of the spark which grows purged flame.
 So were the sacrifice o'er sin, if so
 The fated passage of a soul be stayed
 Nor, spake he, shall one wash his spirit clean
 By blood, nor gladden gods, being good, with blood;
 Nor bribe them, being evil, nay, nor lay
 Upon the brow of innocent bound beasts
 One hair's weight of that answer all must give
 For all things done amiss or wrongfully,
 Alone, each for himself, reckoning with that
 The fixed arithmetic of the universe,
 Which meteth good for good and ill for ill,
 Measure for measure, unto deeds, words, thoughts,
 Watchful, aware, implacable, unmoved;
 Making all futures fruits of all the pasts
 Thus spake he, breathing words so piteous,
 With such high lordliness of ruth and right,
 The priests drew down their garments o'er the hands
 Crimsoned with slaughter, and the King came near,
 Standing with clasped palms reverencing Buddha,
 While still our Lord went on, teaching how fair
 This earth were if all living things be linked
 In friendliness and common use of foods, '
 Bloodless and pure, the golden grain, bright fruits,
 Sweet herbs which grow for all, the waters wao,

Sufficient drinks and meats Which when these heard,

The might of gentleness so conquered them,
The priests themselves scattered their altar-flames
And flung away the steel of sacrifice,
And through the land next day passed a decree
Proclaimed by eriers, and in this wise graved Oo rock and column "Thus the King's will is —
There hath been slaughter for the sacrifice
And slaying for the meat, but henceforth none
Shall spill the blood of life nor taste of flesh,
Seeing that knowledge grows, and life is ooc,
And mercy cometh to the merciful"

So rao the edict, and from those days forth
Sweet peace hath spread between all living kind,
Man and the beasts which serve him, and the birds,
On all those banks of Gunga where our Lord
Taught with his saintly pity and soft speech.

For aye so piteous was the Master's heart
To all that breathe this breath of fleeting life,
Yoked in one fellowship of joys and pains,
That it is written in the holy books
How, in an ancient age—when Buddha wore
A Brahmin's form, dwelling upon the rock
Named Munda, by the village of Dálidd—
Drought withered all the land the young rice died
Ere it could hide a quail, in forest glades
A fierce sun sucked the pools, grasses and herbs
Sickened, and all the woodland creatures fled
Scattering for sustenance At such a time,
Between the hot walls of a nullah, stretched

On naked stones, our Lord spied, as he passed,
 A starving tigress Hunger in her orbs
 Glared with green flame, her dry tongue lolled a span
 Beyond the gasping jaws and shrivelled jowl
 Her painted hide hung wrinkled on her ribs,
 As when between the rafters sinks a thatch
 Rotten with rains, and at the poor lean dugs
 Two cubs, whining with famine, tugged and sucked, Mumbling those milkless teats which rendered nought,

While she, their gaunt dam, licked full motherly
 The clamorous twins, and gave her flank to them
 With moaning throat, and love stronger than want,
 Softening the first of that wild cry wherewith
 She laid her famished muzzle to the sand
 And roared a savage thunder-peal of woe
 Seeing which bitter strait, and heeding nought
 Save the immeose compassion of a Buddh,
 Our Lord bethought "There is no other way
 To help this murderess of the woods but one
 By sunset these will die, having no meat
 There is no living heart will pity her,
 Bloody with ravin, lean for lack of blood.
 Lo! if I feed her, who shall lose but I,
 And how can love lose doing of its kind
 Even to the uttermost?" So saying, Buddh
 Silently laid aside sandals and staff,
 His saered thread, turbao, and cloth, and came Forth from behind the milk-bush on the sand,
 Saying, "Ho! mother, here is meat for thee!"
 Whereat the perishing beast yelped hoarse and shrill,
 Sprang from her cubs, and, hurling to the earth

That willing victim, had her feast of him
With all the crooked daggers of her claws
Rending his flesh, and all her yellow fangs
Bathed in his blood the great cat's burning breath
Mixed with the last sigh of such fearless love

Thus large the Master's heart was long ago,
Not only now, when with his gracious ruth
He bade cease cruel worship of the Gods
And much King Bimbisâra prayed our Lord—
Learning his royal birth and holy search—
To tarry in that city, saying oft,
"Thy princely state may not abide such fasts,
Thy hands were made for sceptres, not for alms
Sojourn with me, who have no son to rule,
And teach my kingdom wisdom till I die,
Lodged in my palace with a beauteous bride"
But ever spake Siddârtha, of set mind.
"These things I had, most noble King, and left,
Seeking the truth, which still I seek, and shall,
Not to be stayed though Sâkra's palace ope'd
Its doors of pearl and Devis wooed me in
I go to build the Kingdom of the Law,
Journeying to Gaya and the forest shades,
Where, as I think, the light will come to me,
For nowise here among the Rishis comes
That light, nor from the Shasters, nor from fasts
Borne till the body faints, starved by the soul
Yet there is light to reach and truth to win,
And surely, O true Friend, if I attain
I will return and quit thy love"

Thereat

Thrice round the Prince King Bimbisāra paced,
 Reverently bending to the Master's feet,
 And bade him speed So passed our Lord away
 Towards Uravilva, not yet comforted,
 And wan of face, and weak with six years' quest.
 But they upon the hill and in the grove—
 Alāra, Udra, and the ascetics five—
 Had stayed him, saying all was written clear
 In holy Shasters, and that none might win
 Higher than Srut and than Smrit—nay,
 Not the chief saints¹—for how should mortal man
 Be wiser than the Jnana-Kānd, which tells
 That Brahm is bodiless and actionless,
 Passionless, calm, unqualified, unchanged,
 Pure life, pure thought, pure joy² Or how should man
 Be better than the Karma-Kānd, which shows
 How he may strip passion and action off,
 Break from the bond of self, and so, unsphered,
 Be God, and melt into the vast divine,
 Flying from false to true, from wars of sense
 To peace eternal, where the Silence lives³

But the Prince heard them, not yet comforted.

BOOK THE SIXTH

THOU, who wouldst see where dawned the light at last,

North-westwards from the "Thousand Gardens"

go
By Gunga's valley till thy steps be set
On the green hills where those two streamlets spring,

Nilâjan and Mohâna, follow them,
Winding beneath broad-leaved mahûa-trees,
'Mid thickets of the sansâr and the bir,
Till on the plain the shining sisters meet
In Phalgu's bed, flowing by rocky banks
To Gâya and the red Barabar hills
Hard by that river spreads a thorny waste,
Uruwelaya named in ancient days,
With sandhills broken, on its verge a wood
Waves sea-green plumes and tassels thwart the sky,
With undergrowth wherethrough a still flood steals,
Dappled with lotus-blossoms, blue and white,
And peopled with quick fish and tortoises
Near it the village of Senâni reared
Its roofs of grass, nestled amid the palms,
Peaceful with simple folk and pastoral toils

There in the sylvan solitudes once more
Lord Buddha lived, musing the woes of men,

The ways of fate, the doctrines of the books,
The lessons of the creatures of the brake,
The secrets of the silence whence all come,
The secrets of the gloom whereto all go,
The life which lies between, like that arch flung From cloud to cloud across the sky, which hath Mists for its masonry and vapoury piers,
Melting to void again which was so fair
With sapphire hues, garnet, and chrysoprase
Moon after moon our Lord sate in the wood,
So meditating these that he forgot
Oftimes the hour of food, rising from thoughts
Prolonged beyond the sunrise and the moon,
To see his bowl unfilled, and eat perforce
Of wild fruit fallen from the boughs o'erhead,
Shaken to earth by chattering ape or plucked
By purple paroquet. Therefore his grace
Faded, his body, worn by stress of soul,
Lost day by day the marks, thirty and two,
Which testify the Buddha. Scarce that leaf,
Fluttering so dry and withered to his feet
From off the sâl-branch, bore less likeness
Of spring's soft greenery than he of him
Who was the princely flower of all his land.

And once, at such a time, the o'erwrought Prince Fell to the earth in deadly swoon all spent,
Even as one slain, who hath no longer breath
Nor any stir of blood, so wan he was,
So motionless. But there came by that way
A shepherd boy, who saw Siddârtha lie
With lids fast-closed, and lines of nameless pain

Fixed on his lips—the fiery noonday sun
Beating upon his head—who, plucking boughs
From wild-rose apple trees, knitted them thick
Into a bower to shade the sacred face
Also he poured upon the Master's lips
Drops of warm milk, pressed from his she-goat's bag,
Lest, being low caste, he, by touching, wrong one
So high and holy seeming But the books
Tell how the jambu-branches, planted thus,
Shot with quick life, in wealth of leaf and flower,
And glowing fruitage interlaced and close,
So that the bower grew like a tent of silk
Pitched for a king at hunting, decked with studs
Of silver-work and bosses of red gold
And the boy worshipped, deeming him some God,
But our Lord gaining breath, rose and asked Milk in the shepherd's lota "Ah, my Lord,
I cannot give thee," quoth the lad, "thou seest
I am a Sudra, and my touch defiles!"
Then the World-honoured spake "Pity and need
Make all flesh kin There is no caste in blood,
Which runneth of one hue, nor caste in tears,
Which trickle salt with all, neither comes man
To birth with tulka-mark stamped on the brow,
Nor sacred thread on neck Who doth right deed
Is twice-born, and who doeth ill deeds vile
Give me to drink, my brother, when I come Unto my quest it shall be good for thee"
Thereat the peasant's heart was glad, and gave

And on another day there passed that road
A band of tressed girls, the nautch-dancers

Of Indra's temple in the town, with those Who made their music—one that beat a drum
 Set round with peacock-feathers, one that blew
 The piping bánsuli, and one that twitched
 A three-string sitar. Lightly tripped they down
 From ledge to ledge and through the chequered paths
 To some gay festival, the silver bells
 Chiming soft peals about the small brown feet,
 Armlets and wrist-rings tattling answer shrill,
 While he that bore the sitar thrummed and twanged
 His threads of brass, and she beside him sang—

*"Fair goes the dancing when the sitar's tuned,
 Tune us the sitar neither low nor high,
 And we will dance away the hearts of men*

*The string o'erstretched breaks, and the music flies,
 The string o'erslack is dumb, and music dies,
 Tune us the sitar neither low nor high."*

So sang the nautch-girl to the pipe and wires,
 Fluttering like some vain, painted butterfly
 From glade to glade along the forest path,
 Nor dreamed her light words echoed on the ear
 Of him, that holy man, who sat so rapt
 Under the fig-tree by the path But Buddh
 Lifted his great brow as the wantons passed,
 And spake. "The foolish oft-times teach the wise;
 I strain too much this string of life, belike,
 Meaning to make such music as shall save.
 Mine eyes are dim now that they see the truth,
 My strength is waned now that my need is most,

Would that I had such help as man must have,
For I shall die, whose life was all men's hope "

Now, by that river dwelt a laodholder
Pious and rich, master of many herds,
A goodly chief, the friend of all the poor ,
And from his house the village drew its name—
" Senâoi " Pleasant and so peace he lived,
Having for wife Sujâta, loveliest
Of all the dark-eyed daughters of the plain ,
Gentle and true, simple and kind was she,
Noble of mien, with gracious speech to all
And gladsome looks—a pearl of womanhood—
Passing calm years of household happiness
Beside her lord in that still Indian home,
Save that no male child blessed their wedded love.
Wherefore, with many prayers she had besought
Lakshmi, and many nights at full-moon goe
Round the great Lingam, nine times nine, with gifts
Of rice and jasmine wreaths and sandal oil
Praying a boy, also Sujâta vowed—
If this should be—so offering of food
Unto the Wood-God, plentiful, delicate,
Set so a bowl of gold under his tree,
Such as the lips of Deys may taste and take
And this had been for there was born to her
A beautiful boy, now three months old, who lay
Between Sujâta's breasts, while she did pace
With grateful footsteps to the Wood-God's shrine,
One arm clasping her crimson sari close
To wrap the babe, that jewel of her joys,
The other lifted high in comely curve

To steady on her head the bowl and dish
Which held the dainty victuals for the God.

But Radha, sent before to sweep the ground
And tie the scarlet threads around the tree,
Came eager, crying, "Ah, dear Mistress ! look
There is the Wood-God sitting in his place,
Revealed, with folded hands upon his knees
See how the light shines round about his brow !
How mild and great he seems, with heavenly eyes !
Good fortune is it thus to meet the gods "

So,—thinking him divine,—Sujâta drew
Tremblingly nigh, and kissed the earth and said,
With sweet face bent, "Would that the Holy One
Inhabiting this grove, Giver of good,
Merciful unto me his handmaiden,
Vouchsafing now his presence, might accept
These our poor gifts of soowy curds, fresh made
With milk as white as new-carved ivory ! "

Therewith into the golden bowl she poured
The curds and milk, and on the hands of Buddh
Dropped attar from a crystal flask—distilled
Out of the hearts of roses and he ate,
Speaking no word, while the glad mother stood
In reverence apart But of that meal
So wondrous was the virtue that our Lord
Felt strength and life return as though the nights
Of watching and the days of fast had passed
In dream, as though the spirit with the flesh
Shared that fine meat and plumed its wings anew.

Like some delighted bird at sudden streams
 Weary with flight o'er endless wastes of sand,
 Which laves the desert dust from neck and crest,
 And more Sujâta worshipped, seeing our Lord
 Grow fairer and his countenance more bright
 "Art thou indeed the God?" she lowly asked,
 "And hath my gift found favour?"

But Boddh said,

"What is it thou dost bring me?"

"Holy One!"

Answered Sujâta, "from our droves I took Milk of a hundred mothers, newly-calved,
 And with that milk I fed fifty white cows,
 And with their milk twenty-and-five, and then
 With theirs twelve more, and yet again with theirs
 The six noblest and best of all our herds
 That yield I boiled with sandal and fine spice
 In silver lotus, adding rice, well grown
 From chosen seed, set in new-broken ground,
 So picked that every grain was like a pearl
 This did I of true heart, because I vowed Under thy tree, if I should bear a boy
 I would make offering for my joy, and now
 I have my son, and all my life is bliss!"

Softly our Lord drew down the crimson fold,
 And, laying on the little head those haads
 Which help the worlds, he said, "Long be thy bliss!
 And lightly fall on him the load of life!
 For thou hast holpen me who am no God,
 But one, thy Brother, heretofore a Prince
 And now a wanderer, seeking night and day

These six hard years that light which somewhere shines

To lighten all men's darkness, if they knew !
And I shall find the light, yea, now it dawned
Glorious and helpful, when my weak flesh failed
Which this pure food, fair Sister, hath restored, Drawn manifold through lives to quicken life
As life itself passes by many births
To happier heights and purging off of sins
Yet dost thou truly find it sweet enough
Only to live ? Can life and love suffice ? ”

Answered Sujāta, “ Worshipful ! my heart
Is little, and a little rain will fill
The lily's cup which hardly moistens the field.
It is enough for me to feel life's sun
Shine in my Lord's grace and my baby's smile,
Making the loving summer of our home.
Pleasant my days pass filled with household cares
From sunrise when I wake to praise the gods,
And give forth grain, and trim the tulsi-plant,
And set my handmaids to their tasks, till noon,
When my Lord lays his head upon my lap
Lulled by soft songs and wavings of the fan ;
And so to supper-time at quiet eve,
When by his side I stand and serve the cakes.
Then the stars light their silver lamps for sleep,
After the temple and the talk with friends.
How should I not be happy, blest so much,
And bearing him this boy whose tiny hand
Shall lead his soul to Swarga, if it need ?
For holy books teach when a man shall plant

Trees for the travellers' shade, and dig a well
For the folks' comfort, and beget a son,
It shall be good for such after their death,
And what the books say that I humbly take,
Being not wiser than those great of old Who spake with gods, and loew the hymns and charms,
And all the ways of virtue and of peace
Also I think that good must come of good
And ill of evil—surely—unto all—
In every place and time—seeing sweet fruit
Groweth from wholesome roots, and bitter things
From poison stocks, yea, seeing, too, how spite Breeds hate, and kindness friends, and patience peace
Even while we live, and when 'tis willed we die
Shall there not be as good a 'Then' as 'Now' ?
Haply much better ! since one grain of rice
Shoots a green feather gemmed with fifty pearls,
And all the starry champak's white and gold
Lurks in those little, oaked, grey spring-buds
Ah, Sir ! I know there might be woes to bear
Would lay poor Patience with her face in dust.
If this my babe pass first I think my heart
Would break—almost I hope my heart would break ;
That I might clasp him dead and wait my Lord—
In whatsoever world holds faithful wives—
Dutious, attending till this hour should come.
But if Death called Seoâoi, I should mount
The pile and lay that dear head in my lap,
My daily way, rejoicing when the torch
Lit the quick flame and rolled the choking smoke
For it is written if an Indian wife

Die so, her love shall give her husband's soul
 For every hair upon her head a crore
 Of years in Swarga Therefore fear I not;
 And therefore, Holy Sir¹ my life is glad,
 Nowise forgetting yet those other lives
 Painful and poor, wicked and miserable,
 Whereon the gods grant pity¹ But for me,
 What good I see humbly I seek to do,
 And live obedient to the law, in trust
 That what will come, and must come, shall come well "

Then spake our Lord, "Thou teachest them who teach,
 Wiser than wisdom in thy simple lore
 Be thou content to know not, knowing thus Thy way of right and duty grow, thou flower¹
 With thy sweet kind in peaceful shade—the light
 Of Truth's high noon is not for tender leaves
 Which must spread broad in other sues, and lift
 In later lives a crowned head to the sky.
 Thou who hast worshipped me, I worship thee¹
 Excellent heart¹ learned unknowingly,
 As the dove is which flieth home by love.
 In thee is seen why there is hope for man
 And where we hold the wheel of life at will Peace go with thee, and comfort all thy days¹
 As thou accomplishest, may I achieve¹
 He whom thou thoughtest God bids thee wish this."

"Mayest thou achieve¹" she said, with earnest eyes
 Bent on her babe, who reached its tender hands

To Buddh—knowing, belike, as children know,
 More than we deem, and reverencing our Lord,
 But he arose—made strong with that pure meat—
 And bent his footsteps where a great Tree grew,
 The Bôdhi-tree (thenceforward to all years
 Never to fade, and ever to be kept
 In homage of the world), beneath whose leaves
 It was ordained the Truth should come to Buddh
 Which now the Master knew, wherefore he went
 With measured pace, steadfast, majestical,
 Unto the Tree of Wisdom Oh, ye Worlds!
 Rejoice! our Lord wended unto the Tree!

Whom—as he passed into its ample shade,
 Cloistered with columned dropping stems, and roofed With vaults of glistening green—the conscious earth
 Worshipped with waving grass and sudden flush
 Of flowers about his feet. The forest-boughs
 Bent down to shade him, from the river sighed
 Cool wafts of wind laden with lotus-scents
 Breathed by the water-gods Large wondering eyes
 Of woodland creatures—paothor, boar, and deer—
 At peace that eve, gazed on his face benign
 From cave and thicket From its cold cleft wound
 The mottled deadly snake, dancing its hood
 In honour of our Lord, bright butterflies
 Fluttered their vans, azure and green and gold,
 To be his fan-bearers, the fierce kite dropped
 Its prey and screamed, the striped palm-squirrel raced
 From stem to stem to see, the weaver bird
 Chirped from her swinging nest, the lizard ran,

The loīl sang her hymn, the doves flocked round,
Even the creeping things were 'ware and glad.
Voices of earth and air joined in one song,
Which unto ears that hear said, "Lord and Friend!
Lover and Saviour! Thou who hast subdued
Angers and prides, desires and fears and doubts, Thou that for each and all hast given thyself,
Pass to the Tree! The sad world blesseth thee
Who art the Buddh that shall assuage her woes
Pass, Hailed and Honoured! strive thy last for us,
King and high Conqueror! thine hour is come;
This is the Night the ages waited for!"
Then fell the night, even as our Master sate
Under that Tree. But he who is the Prince
Of Darkness, Mara—knowing this was Buddh
Who should deliver men, and now the hour
When he should find the Truth and save the worlds—
Gave unto all his evil powers command
Wherefore there trooped from every deepest pit
The fiends who war with Wisdom and the Light,
Arati, Trishna, Raga, and their crew
Of passions, horrors, ignorances, lusts,
The brood of gloom and dread, all hating Buddh,
Seeking to shake his mind, nor knoweth one,
Not even the wisest, how those fiends of Hell
Battled that night to keep the Truth from Buddh.
Sometimes with terrors of the tempest, blasts
Of demon-armies clouding all the wind
With thunder, and with blinding lightning flung
In jagged javelins of purple wrath
From splitting skies, sometimes with wiles and words

Fair-sounding, 'mid hushed leaves and softeogd airs
 From shapes of witching beauty, wanton songs,
 Whispers of love, sometimes with royal allures
 Of proffered rule, sometimes with mocking doubts,
 Making truth vain But whether these befell
 Without and visible, or whether Buddh
 Strove with fell spirits in his inmost heart,
 Judge ye —I write what ancient books have writ.

The ten chief Sins came—Mara's mighty ones,
 Angels of evil—Attavâda first,
 The Sin of Self, who in the Universe
 As in a mirror sees her fond face shown,
 And, crying "I," would have the world say "I,"
 And all things perish so if she endure
 "If thou be'st Buddh," she said, "let others grope
 Lightless, it is enough that Thou art Thou
 Changelessly, rise and take the bliss of gods
 Who chaoge not, beed not, strive not" But Buddh spake,
 "The right in thee is base, the wrong a curse, Cheat such as love themselves" Then came wan Doubt,

He that denies—the mocking Sio—aod this Hissed in the Master's ear, "All things are shows,
 Aod vain the knowledge of their vanity,
 Thou dost but chase the shadow of thyself,
 Rise aod go heoce, there is no better way
 Than patient scorn, nor any help for man,
 Nor any staying of his whirling wheel"
 But quoth our Lord, "Thou hast no part with me, False Visikitchiz¹ subtlest of man's foes"

And third came she who gives dark creeds their power,
 Silabbat-paramâsa, sorceress,
 Draped fair in many lands as lowly Faith,
 But ever juggling souls with rites and prayers,
 The keeper of those keys which lock up Hells
 And open Heavens. "Wilt thou dare," she said,
 "Put by our sacred books, dethrone our gods,
 Unpeople all the temples, shaking down
 That law which feeds the priests and props the realms?"

But Buddha answered, "What thou bidd'st me keep Is form which passes, but the free Truth stands, Get thee unto thy darkness." Next there drew Gallantly nigh a braver Tempter, he,
 Kama, the King of passions, who hath sway
 Over the gods themselves, Lord of all loves,
 Ruler of Pleasure's realm Laughing he came Unto the tree, bearing his bow of gold
 Wreathed with red blooms, and arrows of desire Pointed with five-tongued delicate flame, which stings

The heart it smites sharper than poisoned barb.
 And round him came into that lonely place
 Bands of bright shapes with heavenly eyes and lips
 Singing in lovely words the praise of Love
 To music of invisible sweet chords,
 So witching, that it seemed the night stood still
 To hear them, and the listening stars and moon
 Paused in their orbits while these hymned to Buddh
 Of lost delights, and how a mortal man
 Findeth nought dearer in the Three wide worlds

Than are the yielded living fragrant breasts ,
 Of Beauty and the rosy breast-blossoms,
 Love's rubies, nay, and toucheth nought more high
 Than is that dulcet harmony of form
 Secco in the lines and charms of loveliness,
 Unspeakable, yet speaking, soul to soul,
 Owned by the bounding blond, worshipped by will Which leaps to seize it, knowing this is best,
 This the true heaven where mortals are like gods,
 Makers and Masters, this the gift of gifts
 Ever renewed and worth a thousand woes
 For who hath grieved when soft arms shut him safe,
 And all life melted in a happy sigh,
 And all the world was given in one warm kiss ?
 So sang they with soft float of beckoning hands,
 Eyes lighted with love-flames, alluring smiles,
 To wanton dance their supple sides and limbs
 Revealing and concealing like burst buds
 Which tell their colour, but hide yet their hearts
 Never so matchless grace delighted eye
 As troop by troop these midnight-dancers swept Nearer the Tree, each daintier than the last,
 Murmuring " O great Siddârtha ! I am thine, Taste of my mouth and see if youth is sweet ! "
 Also, when nothing moved our Master's mind,
 Lo ! Kama waved his magic bow, and lo !
 The band of dancers opened, and a shape,
 Fairest and stateliest of the throng, came forth
 Wearing the guise of sweet Yasodhara Tender the passion of those dark eyes seemed Brimming with tears, yearning those outspread arms
 Opened towards him. musical that man

Wherewith the beauteous shadow named his name,
 Sighing, "My Prince! I die for lack of thee!
 What heaven hast thou found like that we knew
 By bright Rohini in the Pleasure-house,
 Where all these weary years I weep for thee?
 Return, Siddârtha! ah! return But touch
 My lips again, but let me to thy breast
 Once, and these fruitless dreams will end! Oh, look!
 Am I not she thou lovedst?" But Buddh said,
 "For that sweet sake of her thou playest thus,
 Fair and false Shadow! is thy playing vain,
 I curse thee not who wear'st a form so dear,
 Yet as thou art so are all earthly shows
 Melt to thy void again!" Thereat, a cry
 Thrilled through the grove, and all that comely rout
 Faded with flickering wafts of flame, and trail
 Of vaporous robes

Next, under darkening skies
 And noise of rising storm, came fiercer Sins,
 The rearmost of the Ten, Patigha—Hate—
 With serpents coiled about her waist, which suck
 Poisonous milk from both her hanging dugs,
 And with her curses mix their angry hiss
 Little wrought she upon that Holy One
 Who with his calm eyes dumb'd her bitter lips
 And made her black snakes writhe to hide their fangs
 Then followed Rupa-raga—Lust of days—
 That sensual Sin which out of greed for life
 Forgets to live, and next him Lust of Fame,
 Nobler Arupa-raga, she whose spell
 Beguiles the wise, mother of daring deeds,
 Battles and toils And haughty Mano came,

The Fiend of Pride, and smooth Self-Righteousness,
 Uddhacheha, and—with many a hideous band
 Of vile and formless things, which crept and flapped
 Toad-like and bat-like—Ignorance, the Dam
 Of Fear and Wrong, Avidya, hideous hag, Whose footsteps left the midnight darker, while
 The rooted mountains shook, the wild winds howled,
 The broken clouds shed from their caverns streams
 Of levin-lighted rain; stars shot from heaven,
 The solid earth shuddered as if ooe laid
 Flame to her gaping wounds, the torn black air
 Was full of whistling wogs, of screams and yells,
 Of evil faces peering, of vast fronts
 Terrible and majestic, Lords of Hell
 Who from a thousand Limbos led their troops
 To tempt the Master.

But Buddh heeded not,
 Sitting serene, with perfect virtue walled
 As is a stronghold by its gates and ramps;
 Also the Sacred Tree—the Bôdhi-tree—
 Amid that tumult stirred not, but each leaf
 Glistened as still as when on moonlit eves
 No zephyr spills the gathering gems of dew,
 For all this clamour raged outside the shade
 Spread by those cloistered stems

In the third watch,—
 The earth being still, the hellish legions fled,
 A soft air breathing from the sinking moon—
 Our Lord attained Sammâ-sambuddh, he saw,
 By light which shines beyond our mortal ken,
 The line of all his lives in all the worlds,
 Far back, and farther back, and farthest yet,

Five hundred lives and fifty. Even as one
 At rest upon a mountain-sommit, marks
 His path wind up by precipice and crag,
 Past thick-set woods shrunk to a patch, through bogs
 Glittering false-green, down hollows where he toiled
 Breathless; on dizzy ridges where his feet
 Had well nigh slipped, beyond the suony lawns,
 The cataract, and the cavern, and the pool,
 Backward to those dim flats wherefrom he sprang
 To reach the blue; thus Buddha did behold
 Life's upward steps long-linked, from levels low
 Where breath is base, to higher slopes and higher
 Whereon the ten great Virtues wait to lead
 The climber skyward. Also, Buddha saw
 How new life reaps what the old life did sow,
 How where its march breaks off its march begins,
 Holding the gain and answering for the loss,
 And how in each life good begets more good,
 Evil fresh evil, Death but casting up
 Debit or credit, whereupoo th' account
 In merits or demerits stamps itself
 By sure arithmetic—where no tittle drops—
 Certain and just, on some new-springing life, Wherein are packed and scored past thoughts and deeds,
 Strivings and triumphs, memories and marks
 Of lives foregone:

And to the middle watch
 Our Lord attained Abhidya—insight vast Raoging beyond this sphere to spheres unnamed,
 System on system, countless worlds and sues
 Moving in splendid measures baod by baod

Linked in division, one, yet separate,
The silver islands of a sapphire sea
Shoreless, unfathomed, undiminished, stirred
With waves which roll in restless tides of change
He saw those Lords of Light who hold their worlds
By bonds invisible, how they themselves
Circle obedient round mightier orbs
Which serve profounder splendours, star to star
Flashing the ceaseless radiance of life
From centres ever shifting unto cirques
Knowing no uttermost These he beheld
With unsealed vision, and of all those worlds,
Cycle on epicycle, all their tale
Of Kalpas, Mahakalpas—terms of time
Which no man grasps, yea, though he knew to count
The drops in Gunga from her springs to the sea,
Measureless unto speech—whereby these wax
And wane, whereby each of this heavenly host Fulfills its shining life, and darkling dies
Sakwal by Sakwal, depths and heights he passed
Transported through the blue infinitudes,
Marking—behind all modes, above all spheres,
Beyond the burning impulse of each orb—
That fixed decree at silent work which wills
Evolve the dark to light, the dead to life,
To fulness void, to form the yet unformed,
Good unto better, better unto best,
By wordless edict, having none to bid,
None to forbid, for this is past all gods,
Immutable, unspeakable, supreme,
A Power which builds, unbuilds, and builds again,
Ruling all things accordant to the rule

Of virtue, which is beauty, truth, and use
 So that all things do well which serve the Power,
 And ill which hinder, nay, the worm does well
 Obedient to its kind, the hawk does well
 Which carries bleeding quarries to its young;
 The dewdrop and the star shine sisterly
 Globing together in the common work,
 And man who lives to die, dies to live well
 So if he guide his ways by blamelessness
 And earnest will to hinder not but help
 All things both great and small which suffer life
 These did our Lord see in the middle watch

But, when the fourth watch came, the secret came
 Of Sorrow, which with evil mars the law,
 As damp and dross hold back the goldsmith's fire.
 Then was the Dukha-Satya opened him
 First of the "Noble Truths," how Sorrow is Shadow to life, moving where life doth move,
 Not to be laid aside until one lays Living aside, with all its changing states,
 Birth, growth, decay, love, hatred, pleasure, pain,
 Being and doing. How that none strips off
 These sad delights and pleasant griefs who lacks Knowledge to know them snares, but he who knows
 Avidya—Delusion—sets those snares,
 Loves life no longer, but ensues escape
 The eyes of such a one are wide, he sees Delusion breeds Sankhâra, Tendency
 Perverse, Tendency Energy—Vidnân—
 Whereby comes Namarûpa, local Form
 And Name and Bodiment, bringing the man

With senses naked to the sensible,
 A helpless mirror of all shows which pass
 Across his heart, and so Vedanā grows—
 'Sense-life'—false in its gladness, fell in sadness,
 But sad or glad, the Mother of Desire,
 Trishna, that thirst which makes the living drink
 Deeper and deeper of the false salt waves
 Whereon they float, pleasures, ambitions, wealth,
 Praise, fame, or domination, conquest, love,
 Rich meats and robes, and fair abodes and pride
 Of ancient lines, and lust of days, and strife,
 To live, and sins that flow from strife, some sweet,
 Some bitter—Thus Life's thirst quenches itself
 With draughts which double thirst, but who is wise
 Tears from his soul this Trishna, feeds his sease
 No longer on false shows, files his firm mind
 To seek not, strive not, wrong not, bearing meek
 All ills which flow from foregone wrongfulness,
 And so constraining passions that they die
 Famished, till all the sum of ended life—
 The Karma—all that total of a soul
 Which is the things it did, the thoughts it had,
 The 'Self' it wove—with woof of viewless time,
 Crossed on the warp invisible of acts—
 The outcome of him on the Universe,
 Grows pure and soles, either never more
 Needing to find a body and a place,
 Or so informing what fresh frame it takes
 In new existence that the new coils prove Lighter and lighter not to be at all,
 Thus "finishing the Path," free from Earth's cheats,

Released from all the Skandhas of the flesh ;
 Broken from ties—from Upādānas—saved
 From whirling on the Wheel , aroused and sane
 As is a man wakened from hateful dreams.
 Until—greater than Kings, than Gods more glad !—
 The aching craze to live ends, and life glides—
 Lifeless—to nameless quiet, nameless joy,
 Blessed NIRVANA—sinless, stirless rest—
 That change which never changes !

Lo ! the Dawn

Sprang with Buddh's victory ! lo ! in the East
 Flamed the first fires of beauteous day, poured forth
 Through fleeting folds of Night's black drapery.
 High in the widening blue the herald-star
 Faded to paler silver as there shot
 Brighter and brightest bars of rosy gleam
 Across the grey. Far off the shadowy hills
 Saw the great Sun, before the world was 'ware,
 And donned their crowns of crimson, flower by flower

Felt the warm breath of Morn and 'gan unfold
 Their tender lids Over the spangled grass
 Swept the swift footsteps of the lovely Light,
 Turning the tears of Night to joyous gems,
 Decking the earth with radiance, 'brodering
 The sinking storm-clouds with a golden fringe,
 Gilding the feathers of the palms, which waved
 Glad salutation ; darting beams of gold
 Into the glades , touching with magic wand
 The stream to rippled ruby , in the brake '
 Finding the mild eyes of the antelopes
 And saying " It is day ! " in nestled sleep

Touching the small heads uoder many a wing,
 And whispering "Childreo, praise the light of day!"
 Whereat there piped anthems of all the birds,
 The Kōil's fluted song, the Bulbul's hymn,
 The "morn'g, morn'g" of the painted thrush,
 The twitter of the sunbirds starting forth
 To find the honey ere the bees be out,
 The grey crow's caw, the parrot's scream, the strokes
 Of the green hammersmith, the myna's chirp,
 The never-finished love-talk of the doves.
 Yea! and so holy was the influence
 Of that high Dawo which came with victory
 That, far and near, in homes of men there spread
 An unknown peace. The slayer hid his knife,
 The robber laid his plunder back, the shroff
 Counted full tale of coins, all evil hearts
 Grew gentle, kind hearts gentler, as the balm
 Of that divinest Daybreak lightened Earth
 Kings at fierce war called truce, the sick men leaped
 Laughing from beds of pain, the dying smiled
 As though they knew that happy Morn was sprung
 From fountains farther than the utmost East,
 And o'er the heart of sad Yasôdhara,
 Sitting forlorn at Prince Siddârtha's bed,
 Came sudden bliss, as if love should not fail
 Nor such vast sorrow miss its end in joy
 So glad the World was—though it wist not why—
 That never desolate wastes went swoning songs
 Of mirth, the voice of bodiless Prets and Bhuts
 Foreseeing Buddh, and Devas in the air
 Cried "It is finished, finished!" and the priests
 Stood with the wondering people in the streets

Watching those golden splendours flood the sky,
 And saying "There hath happed some mighty thing"
 Also in Ran and Jungle grew that day
 Friendship amongst the creatures; spotted deer
 Browsed fearless where the tigress fed her cubs,
 And cheetahs lapped the pool beside the bucks,
 Under the eagle's rock the brown hares scoured
 While his fierce beak but preened an idle wing;
 The snake sunned all his jewels in the beam
 With deadly fangs in sheath; the shrike let pass
 The nestling-finch, the emerald halcyons
 Sate dreaming while the fishes played beneath,
 Nor hawked the merops, though the butterflies—
 Crimson and blue and amber—flitted thick
 Around his perch, the Spirit of our Lord
 Lay potent upon man and bird and beast,
 Even while he mused under that Bôdhi-tree,
 Glorified with the Conquest gained for all,
 And lightened by a Light greater than Day's.

Then he arose—radiant, rejoicing, strong—
 Beneath the Tree, and lifting high his voice
 Spake this, in hearing of all Times and Worlds —

 SAFE PASS I THENCE—DELIVERANCE TO OBTAIN

BOOK THE SEVENTH

SORROWFUL dwelt the King Suddhōdana
All those long years among the Sākya Lords
Lacking the speech and presence of his Son ,
Sorrowful sate the sweet Yasōdhara
All those long years, knowing no joy of life,
Widowed of him her living Liege and Prince.
And ever, on the news of some recluse
Seen far away by pasturing camel-men
Or traders threading devious paths for gain,
Messengers from the King had gone and come,
Bringing account of many a holy sage
Lonely and lost to home , but nought of him
The crown of white Kapilavastu's line,
The glory of her monarch and his hope,
The heart's content of sweet Yasōdhara,
Far-wandered now, forgetful, changed, or dead

But on a day in the Wasanta-time,
When silver sprays swing on the mango-trees
And all the earth is clad with garb of spring,
The Princess sate by that bright garden-stream
Whose gliding glass, bordered with lotus-cups,
Mirrored so often in the bliss gone by Their clinging hands and meeting lips Her lids
Were wan with tears, her tender cheeks had thinned ,
Her lips' delicious curves were drawn with grief ;

The lustrous glory of her hair was hid—
Close-boued as widows use, no ornament
She wore, nor any jewel clasped the cloth—
Coarse, and of mourning-white—crossed on her breast

Slow moved and painfully those small fine feet
Which had the roe's gait and the rose-leaf's fall
In old years at the loving voice of him
Her eyes, those lamps of love,—which were as if Sunlight should shine from out the deepest dark,
Ullomming Night's peace with Daytime's glow—
Unlighted now, and roving aimlessly,
Scarce marked the clustering signs of coming Spring,
So the silk lashes drooped over their orbs
In one hand was a girdle thick with pearls,
Siddârtha's—treasured since that night he fled—(Ah, bitter Night! mother of weeping days!
When was food Love so pitiless to love,
Save that this scorned to limit love by life?)
The other led her little son, a boy
Divinely fair, the pledge Siddârtha left—
Named Rahula—now seven years old, who tripped
Gladsome beside his mother, light of heart
To see the spring-blooms burgeon o'er the world

So, while they lingered by the lotus-pools,
And, lightly laughing, Rahula flung rice
To feed the blue and purple fish, and she
With sad eyes watched the swiftly-flying cranes, Sighing, "Oh! creatures of the wandering wing,
If ye shall light where my dear Lord is hid,
Say that Yasôdhara lives nigh to death

For one word of his mouth, one touch of him ! ”—
 Thus, as they played and sighed—mother and child—
 Came some among the damsels of the Court Saying, “ Great Princess ! there have entered in
 At the south gate merchants of Hastinpur,
 Tripusha called and Bhalluk, men of worth,
 Long travelled from the loud sea’s edge, who bring Marvellous lovely webs pictured with gold,
 Waved blades of gilded steel, wrought bowls in brass,
 Cut ivories, spice, simples, and unknown birds,
 Treasures of far-off peoples, but they bring
 That which doth beggar these, for He is seen !
 Thy Lord,—our Lord,—the hope of all the land—
 Siddârtha ! they have seen him face to face,
 Yea, and have worshipped him with knees and brows,
 And offered offerings, for he is become
 All which was shown, a Teacher of the wise,
 World-honoured, holy, wonderful ; a Buddh
 Who doth deliver men and save all flesh
 By sweetest speech and pity vast as Heaven.
 And, lo ! he journeyeth hither, these do say ”

Then—while the glad blood bounded in her veins
 As Gunga leaps when first the mountain snows
 Melt at her springs—uprose Yasôdhara
 And clapped her palms, and laughed, with brimming tears
 Beading her lashes. “ Oh ! call quick,” she cried, “ These merchants to my purdah, for mine ears Thirst like parched throats to drink their blessed news
 Go bring them in,—but, if their tale be true,

Say I will fill their girdles with much gold,
 With gems that Kings shall envy come ye too,
 My girls, for ye shall have guerdon of this
 If there be gifts to speak my grateful heart "

So went those merchants to the Pleasure-House,
 Full softly pacing through its golden ways
 With naked feet, amid the peerless maids,
 Much wondering at the glories of the Court.
 Whom, when they came without the purdah's folds,
 A voice, tender and eager, filled and charmed
 With trembling music, saying, "Ye are come
 From far, fair Sirs! and ye have seen my Lord—
 Yea, worshipped—for he is become a Buddh,
 World-honoured, holy, and delivers men,
 And journoyeth hither Speak! for, if this be,
 Friends are ye of my House, welcome and dear "

Then answer made Tripusha, "We have seen
 That sacred Master, Princess! we have bowed
 Before his feet, for who was lost a Prince
 Is found a greater than the King of kings
 Under the Bôdhi-tree by Phalgû's bank
 That which shall save the world hath late been wrought
 By him,—the Friend of all, the Prince of all—
 Thine most, High Lady! from whose tears men win
 The comfort of this Word the Master speaks
 Lo! he is well, as one beyond all ills,
 Uplifted as a god from earthly woes,
 Shining with risen Truth, golden and clear
 Moreover is he entereth town by town,

Preaching those noble ways which lead to peace,
 The hearts of men follow his path as leaves
 Troop to the wind or sheep draw after one
 Who knows the pastures We ourselves have heard,
 By Gaya in the green Tchirnika grove,
 Those wondrous lips and done them reverence.
 He cometh hither ere the first rains fall ”

Thus spake he, and Yasôdhara, for joy,
 Scarce mastered breath to answer, “ Be it well
 Now and at all times with ye, worthy friends !
 Who bring good tidings, but of this great thing
 Wist ye how it befell ? ”

Then Bhalluk told
 Such as the people of the valleys knew
 Of that dread night of conflict, when the air
 Darkened with fiendish shadows, and the earth
 Quaked, and the waters swelled with Mara's wrath.
 Also how gloriously that morning broke Radiant with rising hopes for man, and how
 The Lord was found rejoicing 'neath his Tree.
 But many days the burden of release—
 To be escaped beyond all storms of doubt,
 Safe on Truth's shore—lay, spake he, on that heart
 A golden load, for how shall men—Buddh mused—
 Who love their sins and cleave to cheats of sense,
 And drink of error from a thousand springs,
 Having no mind to see, nor strength to break
 The fleshly snare which binds them—how should such Receive the Twelve Nidânas and the Law
 Redeeming all, yet strange to profit by,
 As the caged bird oft shuns its opened door ?

So had we missed the helpful victory
 If, in this earth without a refuge, Buddh,
 Winding the way, had deemed it all too hard
 For mortal feet and passed, none following him.
 Yet pondered the compassion of our Lord,
 But in that hour there rang a voice as sharp
 As cry of travail, so as if the earth
 Moaned in birth-throe, "Naiyam aham bbû Naiyam loka !" SURELY I AM LOST,

AND MY CREATURES then a pause, and next
 A pleading sigh borne on the western wind,
 "Sruyatam dharma, Bhagwat !" OH, SUPREME !
 LET THY GREAT LAW BE UTTERED ! Whereupon
 The Master cast his vision forth on flesh,
 Saw who should hear and who must wait to hear,
 As the keen Sun gilding the lotus-lakes
 Seeth which buds will open to his beams
 And which are not yet risen from their roots,
 Then spake, divinely smiling, "Yea ! I preach !
 Whoso will listen let him learn the Law "

Afterwards passed he, said they, by the hills
 Unto Benares, where he taught the Five,
 Showing how birth and death should be destroyed,
 And how man hath no fate except past deeds,
 No Hell but what he makes, no Heaven too high
 For those to reach whose passions sleep subdued
 This was the fifteenth day of Vaishya
 Mid-afternoon, and that night was full moon

But, of the Rishis, first Kaundinya
 Owned the Four Truths and entered on the Paths

And after him Bhadraka, Asvajit,
 Basava, Mahanâma; also there
 Within the Deer-park, at the feet of Buddh, Yasad the Prince with nobles fifty-four,
 Hearing the blessed word our Master spake, Worshipped and followed, for there sprang up peace

And knowledge of a new time come for men
 In all who heard, as spring the flowers and grass
 When water sparkles through a sandy plain.

These sixty—said they—did our Lord send forth,
 Made perfect in restraint and passion-free,
 To teach the Way, but the World-honoured turned South from the Deer-park and Isipatan
 To Yashti and King Bimbisâra's realm,
 Where many days he taught, and after these King Bimbisâra and his folk believed,
 Learning the law of love and ordered life.
 Also he gave the Master, of free gift,— Pouring forth water on the hands of Buddh,—
 The Bamboo-Garden, named Wéluvana,
 Wherein are streams and caves and lovely glades;
 And the King set a stone there, carved with this —

*Té dharma hetuppabbawâ Tesan hétun Tathâgatô,
 Aha yesan cha yo nirodhô
 Ewan cwadi Maha Samno*

“What life's course and cause sustain
 These Tathâgato made plain.

What delivers from life's woe
That our Lord hath made us know "

And, in that Gardeo—said they—there was held
A high Assembly, where the Teacher spake
Wisdom and power, winning all souls which heard,
So that nine hundred took the yellow robe—
Such as the Master wears,—and spread his Law;
And this the gâthâ was wherewith he closed —

Sabba pápassa akaranan
Kusalassa upasampadâ
Sa chitta pariyyodapanan
Etan Buddhânusâsanan

" Evil swells the debts to pay,
Good delivers and acquits,
Shun evil, follow good, hold sway
Over thyself. 'This is the Way "

Whom, when they ended, speaking so of him,
With gifts, and thanks which made the jewels dull,
The Princess recompensed " But by what road Wendeth my Lord? " she asked the merchants said,

" Yôjans threescore stretch from the city-walls
To Rajagriha, whence the easy path
Passeth by Sona hither, and the hills
Our oxen, treading eight slow loss a day,
Came to ooe moon "

Then the King, hearing word,
Sent nobles of the Court—well-mounted lords—

Nine separate messengers, each embassy
 Bidden to say, "The King Suddhâdana—
 Nearer the pyre by seven long years of lack,
 Wherethrough he hath not ceased to seek for thee—
 Prays of his son to come unto his own,
 The Throne and people of this longing Realm,
 Lest he shall die and see thy face no more."
 Also nine horsemen sent Yasôdhara
 Bidden to say, "The Princess of thy House—
 Rahula's mother—craves to see thy face
 As the night-blowing moon-flower's swelling heart
 Pines for the moon, as pale asôka-buds
 Wait for a woman's foot if thou hast found
 More than was lost, she prays her part in this,
 Rahula's part, but most of all thyself."
 So sped the Sâkya Lords, but it befell
 That each one, with the message in his mouth,
 Entered the Bamboo-Garden in that hour
 When Buddha taught his Law, and—hearing—each
 Forgot to speak, lost thought of King and quest,
 Of the sad Princess even, only gazed
 Eye-rapt upon the Master, only hung
 Heart-caught upon the speech, compassionate,
 Commanding, perfect, pure, enlightening all,
 Poured from those sacred lips Look! like a bee
 Winged for the hive, who sees the mûgras spread
 And scents their utter sweetness on the air,
 If he be honey-filled, it matters not,
 If night be nigh, or rain, he will not heed.
 Needs must he light on those delicious blooms
 And drain their nectar; so these messengers
 One with another, hearing Buddha's words,

Let go the purpose of their speed, and mixed,
 Heedless of all, amid the Master's train
 Wherefore the King bade that Udayi go—
 Chiefest in all the Court, and faithfullest,
 Siddârtha's playmate in the happier days—
 When, as he drew anear the garden, plucked
 Blown tufts of tree-wool from the grove and sealed
 The entrance of his hearing, thus he came Safe through the lofty peril of the place,
 And told the message of the King, and hers

Then meekly bowed his head and spake our Lord
 Before the people, "Surely I shall go!
 It is my duty as it was my will,
 Let no man miss to render reverence
 To those who lend him life, whereby come means
 To live and die no more, but safe attain
 Blissful Nirvâna, if ye keep the Law,
 Purgings past wrongs and adding nought thereto,
 Complete in love and lovely charities
 Let the King know and let the Priocess hear
 'I take the way furewith.'" Thus told, the folk
 Of white Kapilavastu and its fields
 Made ready for the entrance of their Prince
 At the south gate a bright pavilion rose
 With flower-wreathed pillars, and the walls of silk Wrought on their red and green with woven gold
 Also the roads were laid with scented boughs
 Of neem and mango, and full musuks shed
 Sandal and jasmine no the dust, and flags
 Fluttered, and on the day when he should come
 It was ordained how many elephants—

With silver howdahs and their tusks gold-tipped—
 Should wait beyond the ford, and where the drums
 Should boom "Siddârtha cometh!" where the lords
 Should light and worship, and the dancing girls
 Where they should strew their flowers, with dance and song,

So that the steed he rode might tramp knee-deep
 In rose and balsam, and the ways be fair,
 While the town rang with music and high joy
 This was ordained, and all men's ears were pricked
 Dawn after dawn to catch the first drum's beat Announcing, "Now he cometh!"

But it fell—

Eager to be before—Yasôdhara
 Rode in her litter to the city-walls
 Where soared the bright pavilion. All around
 A beauteous garden smiled—Nigrôdha named—
 Shaded with bel-trees and the green-plumed dates,
 New-trimmed and gay with winding walks and banks
 Of fruits and flowers, for the southern road
 Skirted its lawns, on this hand leaf and bloom,
 On that the suburb-huts where base-borns dwelt
 Outside the gates, a patient folk and poor,
 Whose touch for Kshatriya and priest of Brahm
 Were sore defilement Yet those, too, were quick
 With expectation, rising ere the dawn
 To peer along the road, to climb the trees
 At far-off trumpet of some elephant,
 Or stir of temple-drum, and when none came,
 Busied with lowly chares to please the Prince, Sweeping their door-stones, setting forth their flags,

Stringing the fluted fig-leaves into chains,
 New furbishing the Lingam, decking new Yesterday's faded arch of boughs, but aye
 Questioning wayfarers if any noise
 Be on the road of great Siddartha. These
 The Princess marked with lovely languid eyes,
 Watching, as they, the southward plain, and bent
 Like them to listen if the passers gave News of the path. So fell it she beheld
 One slow approaching with his head close shorn,
 A yellow cloth over his shoulder cast,
 Girt as the hermits are, and in his hand
 An earthen bowl, shaped melonwise, the which Meekly at each hut-door he held a space,
 Taking the granted dole with gentle thanks
 And all as gently passing where none gave
 Two followed him wearing the yellow robe,
 But he who bore the bowl so lordly seemed,
 So reverend, and with such a passage moved,
 With so commanding presence filled the air,
 With such sweet eyes of holiness smote all,
 That, as they reached him alms the givers gazed
 Awestruck upon his face, and some bent down
 In worship, and some ran to fetch fresh gifts,
 Grieved to be poor, till slowly, group by group,
 Children and men and women drew behind
 Into his steps, whispering with covered lips,
 "Who is he? who? when looked a Rishi thus?"
 But as he came with quiet footfall on Nigh the pavilion, in the silken door
 Lifted, and, all unveiled, Yashodhara
 Stood in his path crying, "Siddartha! Lord!"

With wide eyes streaming and with close-clasped
hands,
Then sobbing fell upon his feet, and lay

Afterwards, when this weeping lady passed
Into the Noble Paths, and one had prayed
Answer from Buddha wherefore—being vowed Quit of all mortal passion and the touch,
Flower-soft and conquering, of a woman's hands—
He suffered such embrace, the Master said.
"The greater beareth with the lesser love
So it may raise it unto easier heights.
Take heed that no man, being 'scaped from bonds,
Vexeth bound souls with boasts of liberty
Free are ye rather that your freedom spread
By patient winning and sweet wisdom's skill.
Three eras of long toil bring Bodhisáts—
Who will be guides and help this darkling world—
Unto deliverance, and the first is named
Of deep 'Resolve,' the second of 'Attempt,'
The third of 'Nomination' Lo! I lived
In era of Resolve, desiring good,
Searching for wisdom, but mine eyes were sealed.
Count the grey seeds on yonder castor-clump,
So many rains it is since I was Ram,
A merchant of the coast which looketh south
To Lanka and the hiding-place of pearls
Also in that far time Yasôdhara
Dwelt with me in our village by the sea,
Tender as now, and Lukshmi was her name.
And I remember how I journeyed thence Seeking our gain, for poor the household was

And lowly Not the less with wistful tears
 She prayed me that I should not part, nor tempt
 Perils by land and water 'How could love
 Leave what it loved?' she wailed, yet, venturing, I Passed to the Straits, and after storm and toil
 And deadly strife with creatures of the deep,
 And woes beneath the midnight and the noon,
 Searching the wave I won therefrom a pearl
 Moonlike and glorious, such as Kings might buy
 Emptying their treasury Theo came I glad Unto mine hills, but over all that land
 Famine spread sore, ill was I stead to live
 In journey home, and hardly reached my door—
 Aching for food—with that white wealth of the sea
 Tied in my girdle Yet no food was there,
 And on the threshold she for whom I toiled—
 More than myself—lay with her speechless lips
 Nigh unto death for one small gift of grain
 Then cried I, 'If there be who hath of grain,
 Here is a kingdom's ransom for one life,
 Give Lukshmi bread and take my moonlight pearl'
 Whereat one brought the last of all his hoard, Millet—three seers—and clutched the beautiful thing

But Lukshmi lived, and sighed with gathered life,
 'Lo! thou didst love indeed!' I spent my pea
 Well in that life to comfort heart and mind
 Else quite uncomfited, but these pure pearls,
 My last great gain, won from a deeper wave—
 The Two're Nidānas and the Law of Good—
 Cannot be spent, nor dimmed, and most fulfil
 Their perfect beauty being freeliest given

For like as is to Meru yonder hill
 Heaped by the little ants, and like as dew
 Dropped in the footmark of a bounding roe
 Unto the shoreless seas, so was that gift
 Unto my present giving, and so love—
 Vaster in being free from toils of sense—
 Was wisest stooping to the weaker heart;
 And so the feet of sweet Yasôdhara Passed into peace and bliss, being softly led.”

But when the King heard how Siddârtha came Shorn, with the mendicant's sad-coloured cloth,
 And stretching out a bowl to gather orts
 From base-borne' leavings, wrathful sorrow drove Love from his heart Thrice on the ground he spat,

Plucked at his silvered beard, and strode straight forth

Lackeyed by trembling lords Frowning he clomb
 Upon his war-horse, drove the spurs, and dashed, Angered, through wondering streets and lanes of folk Scarce finding breath to say, “The King' bow down!”

Ere the loud cavalcade had clattered by.
 Which—at the turning by the Temple-wall,
 Where the south gate was seen—encountered full
 A mighty crowd, to every edge of it
 Poured fast more people, till the roads were lost,
 Blotted by that huge company which thronged
 And grew, close following him whose look serene
 Met the old King's Nor lived the father's wrath
 Longer than while the gentle eyes of Buddh

Lingered in worship on his troubled brows,
 Then downcast sank, with his true knee, to earth
 In proud humility So dear it seemed To see the Prince, to know him whole, to mark
 That glory greater than of earthly state
 Crowning his head, that majesty which brought All men, so awed and silent, to his steps
 Nathless, the King broke forth, "Ends it in this
 That great Siddârtha steals into his realm,
 • Wrapt in a clout, shorn, sandalled, craving food
 Of low-boros, he whose life was a God's?
 My son! heir of this spacious power, and heir
 Of Kings who did but clap their palms to have What earth could give or eager service bring?
 Thou should'st have come apparelled in thy raiment,
 With shining spears, and tramp of horse and foot
 Lo! all my soldiers camped upoo the road,
 And all my city waited at the gates,
 Where hast thou sojourned through these evil years Whilst thy crowned father mourned? and she, too, there
 Lived as the widows use, foregoing joys,
 Never nnee hearing sound of song or string,
 Nor wearing once the festal robe, till now
 When in her cloth of gold she welcomes home
 A beggar-spouse to yellow remnants clad Sno! why is this?"

 " My Father! " came reply,
 " It is the custom of my race "

 " Thy race, "

Answered the King, " counteth a hundred thrones
 From Maha Sammât, but no deed like this "

"Not of a mortal line," the Master said,
 "I spake, but of descent invisible,
 The Buddhas who have been and who shall be
 Of these am I, and what they did I do,
 And this, which now befalls, so fell before,
 That at his gate a King in warrior-mail
 Should meet his son, a Prince in hermit-weeds,
 And that, by love and self-control, being more Than mightiest Kings in all their puissance,
 The appointed helper of the Worlds should bow—
 As now do I—and with all lowly love
 Proffer, where it is owed for tender debts,
 The first-fruits of the treasure he hath brought :
 Which now I proffer "

Then the King amazed
 Inquired "What treasure?" and the Teacher took Meekly the royal palm, and while they paced Through worshipping streets—the Princess and the King

On either side—he told the things which make
 For peace and pureness, those Four noble Truths
 Which hold all wisdom as shores shut the seas,
 Those eight right Rules whereby who will may walk—

Monarch or slave—upon the perfect Path
 That hath its Stages Four and Precepts Eight,
 Whereby whoso will live—mighty or mean,
 Wise or unlearned, man, woman, young or old—Shall, soon or late, break from the wheels of life,

Attaining blest Nirvâna So they came Into the Palace porch, Suddhâdana

With brows unknot drinking the mighty words,
And in his own hand carrying Buddha's bowl,
Whilst a new light brightened the lovely eyes
Of sweet Yasôdhara and sunned her tears,
And that night entered they the Way of Peace

BOOK THE EIGHTH

A BROAD mead spreads by swift Kohâna's bank
At Nagara, five days shall bring a man
In ox-wain thither from Benares' shrines
Eastward and northward journeying. The horns • •
Of white Himâla look upon the place,
Which all the year is glad with blooms, and girt
By groves made green from that bright streamlet's wave.

Soft are its slopes and cool its fragrant shades,
And holy all the spirit of the spot
Unto this time. the breath of eve comes hushed
Over the tangled thickets, and high heaps
Of carved red stones cloven by root and stem
Of creeping fig, and clad with waving veil
Of leaf and grass. The still snake glistens forth
From crumbled work of lac and cedar-beams
To coil his folds there on deep-graven slabs,
The lizard dwells and darts o'er painted floors
Where Kings have paced, the grey fox litters safe

Under the broken thrones; only the peaks,
And stream, and sloping lawns, and gentle airs
Abide unchanged. All else, like all fair shows
Of life, are fled—for this is where it stood, •
The city of Suddhâdana, the hill
Whereon, upon an eve of gold and blue,

As sinking sun Lord Buddha set himself
To teach the Law in hearing of his own.

So ' ye shall read it in the Sacred Books
How, being met in that glad pleasure-place—
A garden so old days with hanging walks,
Fountains, and tanks, and rose-barked terraces
Girdled by gay pavilions and the sweep
Of stately palace-fronts—the Master sate
Emioent, worshipped, all the earnest throng
Watching the opening of his lips to learn
That wisdom which hath made our Asia mild ;
Whereto four thousand lakhs of living souls
Witness this day Upon the King's right hand
He sate, and round were ranged the Sākya Lords Ananda, Devadatta—all the Court.
Behind stood Senyut and Mugallan, chiefs
Of the calm brethren in the yellow garb,
A goodly company Between his knees
Rahula smiled, with wondering childish eyes
Bent on the awful face, while at his feet
Sate sweet Yasôdhara, her heartaches gone,
Foreseeing that fair love which doth not feed
On fleeting cease, that life which knows no age,
That blessed last of deaths when Death is dead,
His victory and hers Wherefore she laid
Her hand upon his hands, folding around
Her silver shoulder-cloth his yellow-robe,
Nearest in all the world to him whose wo
The Three Worlds waited for I cannot tell
A small part of the splendid lore which broke
From Buddha's lips I am a late-come scribe

Who love the Master and his love of men,
And tell this legend, knowing he was wise,
But have not wit to speak beyond the books ;
And time hath blurred their script and ancient sense,
Which once was new and mighty, moving all
A little of that large discourse I know
Which Buddha spake on the soft Indian eve ;
So, too, I know it writ that they who heard
Were more—lakhs more—crores more—than could be seen,

For all the Devas and the Dead thronged there,
Till Heaven was emptied to the seventh zone
And uttermost dark Hells opened their bars ;
Also the daylight lingered past its time
In rose-leaf radiance on the watching peaks,
So that it seemed Night listened in the glens
And Noon upon the mountains , yea¹ they write,
The Evening stood between them like some maid
Celestial, love-struck, rapt ; the smooth-rolled clouds
Her braided hair , the studded stars the pearls
And diamonds of her coronal , the moon
Her forehead-jewel, and the deepening dark
Her woven garments 'Twas her close-held breath
Which came in scented sighs across the lawns While our Lord taught, and, while he taught, who heard—

Though he were stranger in the land, or slave,
High caste or low, come of the Aryan blood,
Or Mlech or Jungle-dweller—seemed to hear What tongue his fellows talked Nay, outside those Who crowded by the river, great and small,
The birds and beasts and creeping things—'tis writ—

Had sense of Buddha's vast embracing love
 And took the promise of his pitious speech,
 So that their lives—prisoned in shape of ape,
 Tiger, or deer, shagged bear, jackal, or wolf,
 Foul-feeding kite, pearled dove, or peacock gemmed,
 Squat toad, or speckled serpent, lizard, bat,
 Yea, or of fish fanning the river-waves—
 Touched meekly at the skirts of brotherhood
 With mao who hath less innocence than these,
 And in mute gladness knew their bondage broke Whilst Buddha spake these things before the Klog —

Om, AMITAYA ! measure not with words
 Th' Immeasurable, nor sink the string of thought
 Into the Fathomless Who asks doth err,
 Who answers, errs Say nought !

The Books teach Darkness was, at first of all,
 And Brahm, sole meditating in that Night.
 Look not for Brahm and the Begoning there !
 Nor him, nor any light

Shall any gazer see with mortal eyes,
 Or any searcher know by mortal mind ;
 Veil after veil will lift—but there must be Veil upon veil behind

Stars sweep and question not. This is enough
 That life and death and joy and woe abide ;
 And cause and sequence, and the course of time,
 And being's ceaseless tide,

Which, ever changing, runs, linked like a river
By 'ripples following ripples, fast or slow—
The same yet not the same—from far-off fountain
To where its waters flow

Into the seas. These, steaming to the Sun,
Give the lost wavelets back in cloudy fleece
To trickle down the hulls, and glide again ;
Having no pause or peace

This is enough to know, the phantasms are ;
The Heavens, Earths, Worlds, and changes changing them,
A mighty whirling wheel of strife and stress
Which none can stay or stem

Pray not ! the Darkness will not brighten ! Ask Nought from the Silence, for it cannot speak !
Vex not your mournful minds with pious pains !
Ah ! Brothers, Sisters ! seek

Nought from the helpless gods by gift and hymn, Nor bribe with blood, nor feed with fruits and cakes,
Within yourselves deliverance must be sought,
Each man his prison makes.

Each hath such lordship as the loftiest ones ;
Nay, for with Powers above, around, below,
As with all flesh and whatsoever lives,
Act maketh joy and woe

What hath been bringeth what shall be, and is,
Worse—better—last for first and first for last.
The Angels in the Heavens of Gladness reap
Fruits of a holy past

The devils in the underworlds wear out
Deeds that were wicked in an age gone by.
Nothing endures fair virtues waste with time,
Foul sins grow purged thereby

Who toiled a slave may come anew a Prince
For gentle worthiness and merit won,
Who ruled a King may wander earth in rags
For things dooe and undone

Higher than Indra's ye may lift your lot,
And sink it lower than the worm or goat;
The end of many myriad lives is this,
The end of myriads that

Only, while turns this wheel invisible,
No pause, no peace, no staying-place can be,
Who mounts may fall, who falls will mount; the spokes
Go round unceasingly!

* * * *

If ye lay bound upon the wheel of change,
And no way were of breaking from the chain,
The Heart of boundless Being is a curse,
The Soul of Things fell Pain

Ye are not bound ! the Soul of Things is sweet,
The Heart of Being is celestial rest,
Stronger than woe is will that which was Good Doth pass to Better—Best

I, Buddh, who wept with all my brothers' tears, Whose heart was broken by a whole world's
woe,
Laugh and am glad, for there is Liberty !
Ho ! ye who suffer ! know

Ye suffer from yourselves. None else compels,
None other holds you that ye live and die,
And whirl upon the wheel, and hug and kiss
Its spokes of agony,

Its tire of tears, its nave of nothingness
Behold, I show you Truth ! Lower than hell,
Higher than Heaven, outside the utmost stars,
Farther than Brahm doth dwell,

Before beginning, and without an end,
As space eternal and as surety sure,
Is fixed a Power divine which moves to good,
Only its laws endure

This is its touch upon the blossomed rose,
The fashion of its hand shaped lotus-leaves ;
In dark soil and the silence of the seeds
The robe of Spring it weaves ,

That is its painting on the glorious clouds,
And these its emeralds on the peacock's train,
It hath its stations in the stars, its slaves
In lightning, wind, and rain

Out of the dark it wrought the heart of man,
Out of dull shells the pheasant's pencilled neck
Ever at toil, it brings to loveliness
All ancient wrath and wreck

The grey eggs in the golden sun-bird's nest
Its treasures are, the bees' six-sided cell
Its honey-pot, the ant wots of its ways,
The white doves know them well

It spreadeth forth for flight the eagle's wings
What time she beareth home her prey, it sends
The she-wolf to her cubs, for unloved things
It findeth food and friends

It is not marred nor stayed in any use,
All liketh it, the sweet white milk it brings
To mothers' breasts, it brings the white drops, too,
Wherewith the young snake stings

The ordered music of the marching orbs
It makes in viewless canopy of sky,
In deep abyss of earth it hides up gold,
Sards, sapphires, lazuli

Ever and ever fetching secrets forth,
It sitteth in the green of forest-glades
Nursing strange seedlings at the cedar's root,
Devising leaves, blooms, blades.

It slayeth and it saveth, nowise moved
Except unto the working out of doom ;
Its threads are Love and Life, and Death and Pain
The shuttles of its loom.

It maketh and unmaketh, mending all,
What it hath wrought is better than had been,
Slow grows the splendid pattern that it plans
Its wistful hands between.

This is its work upon the things ye see :
The unseen things are more, men's hearts and minds,
The thoughts of peoples and their ways and wills,
Those, too, the great Law binds

Unseen it helpeth ye with faithful hands,
Unheard it speaketh stronger than the storm.
Pity and Love are man's because long stress
Moulded blind mass to form

It will not be contemned of any one,
Who thwarts it loses, and who serves it gains,
The hidden good it pays with peace and bliss,
The hidden ill with pains

It seeth everywhere and marketh all
 Do right—it recompenseth ! do one wrong—
 The equal retribution must be made,
 Though DHARMA tarry long

It knows not wrath nor pardon, utter-true
 Its measures mete, its faultless balance weighs;
 Times are as nought, to-morrow it will judge,
 Or after many days

By this the slayer's knife did stab himself;
 The unjust judge hath lost his own defender;
 The false tongue donna its lie, the creeping thief
 And spoiler rob, to render

Such is the Law which moves to righteousness,
 Which none at last can turn aside or stay,
 The heart of it is Love, the end of it
 Is Peace and Consummation sweet Obey!

* * * *

The Books say well, my Brothers ! each man's life
 The outcome of his former living is,
 The bygone wrongs bring forth sorrows and woes,
 The bygone right breeds bliss

That which ye sow ye reap See yonder fields !
 The sesamum was sesamum, the corn
 Was corn The Silence and the Darkness knew !
 So is a man's fate born.

He cometh, reaper of the things he sowed,
Sesamum, corn, so much cast in past birth ;
And so much weed and poison-stuff, which mar
Him and the aching earth

If he shall labour rightly, rooting these,
And planting wholesome seedlings where they grew,
Fruitful and fair and clean the ground shall be,
And rich the harvest due.

If he who liveth, learning whence woe springs,
Endureth patiently, striving to pay
His utmost debt for ancient evils done
In Love and Truth always ,

If making none to lack, he thoroughly purge
The lie and lust of self forth from his blood ,
Suffering all meekly, rendering for offence
Nothing but grace and good ;

If he shall day by day dwell merciful,
Holy and just and kind and true , and rend
Desire from where it clings with bleeding roots,
Till love of life have end .

He—dying—leaveth as the sum of him
A life-count closed, whose ills are dead and quit.
Whose good is quick and mighty, far and near,
So that fruits follow it.

No need hath such to live as ye name life,
 That which began in him when he began
 Is finished he hath wrought the purpose through
 Of what did make him Man

Never shall yearnings torture him, nor sins
 Stain him, nor ache of earthly joys and woes
 Invade his safe eternal peace, nor deaths
 And lives recur He goes

Unto NIRVÂNÂ He is one with Life,
 Yet lives not He is blest, ceasing to be OM, MANI PADME, OM ' the Dewdrop slips
 Into the shining sea '

* * * * *

This is the doctrine of the KARMA Learn '
 Only when all the dross of sin is quit,
 Only when life dies like a white flame spent
 Death dies along with it.

Say not "I am," "I was," or "I shall be,"
 'Think not ye pass from house to house of flesh
 Like travellers who remember and forget,
 Ill-lodged or well-lodged Fresh

Issues upon the Universe that sum
 Which is the lattermost of lives It makes Its habitation as the worm spins silk
 And dwells therein It takes

Function and substance as the snake's egg hatched
Takes scale and fang, as feathered reed-seeds fly
O'er rock and loam and sand, until they find
Their marsh and multiply.

Also it issues forth to help or hurt.

When Death the bitter murderer doth smite,
Red roams the unpurged fragment of him, driven
On winds of plague and blight

But when the mild and just die, sweet airs breathe,
The world grows richer, as if desert-stream
Should sink away to sparkle up again
Purer, with broader gleam,

So merit won winneth the happier age
Which by demerit halteth short of end ;
Yet must this Law of Love reign King of all
Before the Kalpas end.

What lets ?—Brothers ! the Darkness lets ! which breeds

Ignorance, mazed whereby ye take these shows
For true, and thirst to have, and, having, cling
To lusts which work you woes

Ye that will tread the Middle Road, whose course
Bright Reason traces and soft Quiet smoothes,
Ye who will take the high Nirvâna-way,
List the Four Noble Truths

The First Truth is of Sorrow Be not mocked !
 Life which ye prize is loog-drawn agony *
 Ooly its pams abide , its pleasures are
 As birds which light and fly

Ache of the birth, ache of the helpless days,
 Ache of hot youth and ache of manhood's prime ,
 Ache of the chill grey years and choking death,
 These fill your pitcous time

Sweet is food Love, but funeral-flames must liss
 The breasts which pillow and the lips which chog ;
 Gallant is warlike Might, but vultures pick
 The joints of chief and King.

Beauteous is Earth, but all its forest-broods
 Plot mutual slaughter, hungeriog to live ,
 Of sapphure are the skies, but when men cry
 Famished, no drops they give

Ask of the sick, the mourners, ask of him
 Who tottereth oo his staff, lone and forlorn,
 " Liketh thee life ? " —these say the babe is wise
 That weepeth, beioo boro

The Second Truth is Sorrow's Cause What grief
 Springs of itself and springs not of Desire ?
 Senses and thungs perceived mingle and light
 Passioo's quick spark of fire

So flameth Trishna, lust and thirst of things
Eager ye cleave to shadows, dote on dreams,
A false Self in the midst ye plant, and make A world around which seems,

Blind to the heights beyond, deaf to the sound
Of sweet airs breathed from far past Indra's sky;
Dumb to the summons of the true life kept
For him who false puts by

So grow the strifes and lusts which make earth's war,
So grieve poor cheated hearts and flow salt tears;
So wax the passions, envies, angers, hates;
So years chase blood-stained years

With wild red feet. So, where the grain should grow
Spreads the birān-weed with its evil root
And poisonous blossoms, hardly good seeds find Soil where to fall and shoot;

And, drugged with poisonous drink, the soul departs,
And, fierce with thirst to drink, Karma returns;
Sense-struck again the sodden Self begins,
And new deceits it earns

The Third is Sorrow's Ceasing. This is peace
To conquer love of self and lust of life,
To tear deep-rooted passion from the breast,
To still the inward strife;

For love to clasp Eternal Beauty close,
For glory to be Lord of self, for pleasure
To live beyond the gods, for countless wealth
To lay up lasting treasure

Of perfect service rendered, duties done
In charity, soft speech, and stainless days
These riches shall not fade away in life,
Nor any death dispraise

Then Sorrow ends, for Life and Death have ceased,
How should lamps flicker when their oil is spent?
The old and count is clear, the new is clean,
Thus hath a man content.

* * * * *

The Fourth Truth is The Way It openeth wide
Plain for all feet to tread, easy and near,
The Noble Eightfold Path, it goeth straight
To peace and refuge Hear!

Manifold tracks lead to yon sister-peaks
Around whose snows the gilded clouds are curled;
By steep or gentle slopes the climber comes Where breaks that other world

Strong limbs may dare the rugged road which storms,
Soaring and perilous, the mountain's breast,
The weak must wind from slower ledge to ledge,
With many a place of rest.

So is the Eightfold Path which brings to peace ;
 By lower or by upper heights it goes.
 The firm soul hastes, the feeble taries All
 Will reach the sunlit snows

The First good level is Right Doctrine. Walk
 In fear of Dharma, shunning all offence ,
 In heed of Karma, which doth make man's fate ,
 In lordship over sense

The Second is Right Purpose Have good-will
 To all that lives, letting unkindness die
 And greed and wrath , so that your lives be made
 Like soft airs passing by.

The Third is Right Discourse. Govern the lips
 As they were palace-doors, the King within ,
 Tranquil and fair and courteous be all words
 Which from that presence win

The Fourth is Right Behaviour ' Let each act
 Assail a fault or help a merit grow
 Like threads of silver seen through crystal beads
 Let love through good deeds show

Four higher roadways be Only those feet
 May tread them which have done with earthly things,
Right Purity, Right Thought, Right Loneliness,
Right Rapture Spread no wings

For Sunward flight, thou soul with unplumed vans !
Sweet is the lower air, and safe and known
The homely levels, only strong ones leave
The nest each makes his own.

Dear is the love, I know, of Wife and Child ;
Pleasant the friends and pastimes of your years,
Fruitful of good Life's gentle charities,
Firm-set, though false, its fears

Live—ye who must—such lives as live on these,
Make golden stairways of your weakness, rise
By daily sojourn with those phantasies
To lovelier virtues

So shall ye pass to clearer heights and find
Easier ascents and lighter loads of sins,
And larger will to burst the bonds of sense,
Entering the Path Who wins

To such commencement hath the First Stage touched,
He knows the Noble Truths, the Eightfold Road,
By few or many steps such shall attain
NIRVĀNA's blest abode

Who standeth at the Second Stage, made free
From doubts, delusions, and the inward strife,
Lord of all lusts, quit of the priests and books,
Shall live but one more life

Yet onward lies the Third Stage purged and pure

Hath grown the stately spirit here, hath risen
To love all living things in perfect peace.

His life at end, life's prison

Is broken. Nay, there are who surely pass

Living and visible to utmost goal

By Fourth Stage of the Holy ones—the Buddh^{as}—

And they of stainless soul

Lo ! like fierce foes slain by some warrior,

Ten sins along these Stages lie in dust,

The Love of Self, False Faith, and Doubt are three,

Two more Hatred and Lust

Who of these Five is conqueror hath trod

Three stages out of Four. yet there abide

The Love of Life on earth, Desire for Heaven,

Self-Praise, Error, and Pride

As one who stands on yonder soowy horn

Having oaght o'er him but the boundless blue,

So, these sins being slain, the man is come

NIRVANA's verge unto

Him the Gods envy from their lower seats,

Him the Three Worlds in ruin should not shake,

All life is lived for him, all deaths are dead,

Karma will no more make

New houses Seeking nothing, he gains all,
 Foregoing self, the Universe grows "I."
 If any teach NIRVĀNA is to cease,
 Say unto such they lie

If any teach NIRVĀNA is to live,
 Say unto such they err, not knowing this,
 Nor what light shines beyond their broken lamps,
 Nor lifeless, timeless, bliss

Enter the path! There is no grief like Hate!
 No pains like passion, no deceit like sense!
 Enter the path! far hath he gone whose foot
 Treads down one fond offence

Enter the Path! There spring the healing streams Quenching all thirst! there bloom th' immortal flowers
 Carpeting all the way with joy! there throng
 Swiftest and sweetest hours!

* * * * *

More is the treasure of the Law than gems;
 Sweeter than comb its sweetness, its delights
 Delightful past compare Thereby to live
 Hear the Five Rules aright —

Kill not—for Pity's sake—and lest ye slay
 The meanest thing upon its upward way

Give freely and receive, but take from none
By grted, or force, or fraud, what is his own.

Bear not false witness, slander not, nor lie ;
Truth is the speech of inward purity.

Shun drugs and drinks which work the wit abuse ,
Clear minds, clean bodies, need no Sônia juice

Touch not thy neighbour's wife, neither commit •
Sins of the flesh unlawful and unfit.

These words the Master spake of duties due
To father, mother, children, fellows, friends ;
Teaching how such as may not swiftly break
The clinging chains of sense—whose feet are weak
To tread the higher road—should order so
This life of flesh that all their hither days
Pass blameless in discharge of charities
And first true footfalls in the Eightfold Path ;
Living pure, reverent, patient, pitiful ;
Loving all things which live even as themselves ;
Because what falls for ill is fruit of ill
Wrought in the past, and what falls well of good ;
And that by howsomuch the householder
Purgeth himself of self and helps the world,
By so much happier comes he to next stage,
In so much bettered being This he spake ;
As also long before, when our Lord walked
By Rajagriha in the bamboo-grove

For on a dawn he walked there and beheld
 The householder Singâla, newly bathed,
 Bowing himself with bare head to the earth,
 To Heaven, and all four quarters, while he threw Rice, red and white, from both hands "Wherefore thus

Bowest thou, Brother?" said the Lord, and he,
 "It is the way, Great Sir! our fathers taught
 At every dawn, before the toil begins,
 To hold off evil from the sky above
 And earth beneath, and all the winds which blow"
 Then the World-honoured spake "Scatter not rice,
 But offer loving thoughts and acts to all
 To parents as the East, where rises light,
 To teachers as the South, whence rich gifts come,
 To wife and children as the West, where gleam
 Colours of love and calm, and all days eod,
 To friends and kinsmen and all men as North,
 To humblest living things beneath, to Saints
 And Angels and the blessed Dead above
 So shall all evil be shut off, and so
 The six main quarters will be safely kept"

But to his Own, Them of the yellow robe—
 Those who, as wakened eagles, soar with scorn
 From life's low vale, and wing towards the Sun—
 To these he taught the Ten Observances
 The Dasa-Sil, and how a mendicant
 Must know the Three Doors and the Triple Thoughts,
 The Sixfold States of mind, the Fivefold Powers,
 The Eight High Gates of Purity, the Modes
Of understanding, Iddhi, Upekkhâ,

The Five Great Meditations, which are food
 Sweeter than Amrit for the holy soul,
 The Jhânas and the Three Chief Refuges
 Also he taught his Own how they should dwell;
 How live free from the snares of love and wealth;
 What eat and drink and carry—three plain cloths,— Yellow, of stitched stuff, worn with shoulder bare—
 A girdle, almsbowl, strainer Thus he laid
 The great foundations of our Sangha well,
 That noble Order of the Yellow Robe
 Which to this day standeth to help the World.

So all that night he spake, teaching the Law;
 And on no eyes fell sleep—for they who heard Rejoiced with tireless joy. Also the King,
 When this was finished, rose upon his throne
 And with bared feet bowed low before his Son
 Kissing his hem, and said, "Take me, O Son!
 Lowest and least of all thy Company."
 And sweet Yasôdhara, all happy now,— Cried "Give to Rahula—thou Blessed One!
 The Treasure of the Kingdom of thy Word
 For his inheritance " Thus passed these Three Into the Path

Here endeth what I write

Who love the Master for his love of us
 A little knowing, little have I told Touching the Teacher and the Ways of Peace
 Forty-five rains thereafter showed he those

In many lands and many tongues, and gave
 Our Asiatic Light, that still is beautiful,
 Conquering the world with spirit of strong grace
 All which is written in the holy Books,
 And where he passed, and what proud Emperors
 Carved his sweet words upon the rocks and caves
 And how—in fulness of the times—it fell
 The Buddha died, the great Tathâgato,
 Even as a man 'mongst men, fulfilling all
 And how a thousand thousand lakhs since then Have trod the Path which leads whither he went Unto NIRVANA, where the Silence lives

 I TAKE MY REFUGE IN THY LAW OF GOOD!
 I TAKE MY REFUGE IN THY ORDER! OM!
